RAINEY IS REJECTED BY REPUBLICAN CAUCUS

All House Members of Ballinger-Pinchot Investigation Committee Chosen.

TWO DEMOCRATS NAMED

Insurgents Object to Proceedings and Walk Out Before Action Is Taken.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The caucus of Republican members of the House tonight named the House members of the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation committee. The six men selected include three "regular" Republicans, Murrell of Massachusetts, Olmstead of Pennsylvania, and Denby of Michigan; one "insurgent" Republican, Madison of Kansas, and two Democrats, James of Kentucky and Lloyd of Missouri.

Rainey of Illinois, who with James was named by the Democratic caucus last Saturday night, was rejected by tonight's caucus of the majority and Lloyd was named in his stead.

The caucus lasted three hours and while characterised by acrimony was more peaceful than most members had expected.

In several speeches, strong objections to both James and Rainey were voiced, the objectors claiming to express the views of President Taft. There was no objection to either of them personally but it was urged, especially against Rainey, that their alleged partisanship would unfit them for a judicial investigation.

Against Rainey was cited activity in stirring up trouble for the Republican administration in Panama canal matters.

The matter will probably come up in the House tomorrow and it is expected that the Democrats to a man will vote to repudiate the Republican caucus action. Incidentally there is the question whether in the circumstances Lloyd will consent to serve.

[illegible]

After the vote nominating the four Republicans had been taken, resulting in practically unanimous approval, a separate vote was ordered on the Democratic members of the committee. At this juncture Mr. Cooper, an insurgent, declared that he was authorized by a number of his colleagues to say that they were opposed to naming Democratic members of a committee in a Republican caucus.

"It would be harmful to the Republican party to do so," declared Mr. Cooper.

Mr. Cooper constantly caused laughter by repeated inadvertent allusion to Ollie James as "Jesse James." When corrected he said he had got the name of the famous outlaw in his mind through reading one of his law cases today and meant no reflection upon Representative James; but the laughter was uproarious when in making this explanation he said he "meant no reflection on "Jesse" James.

The strongest partisan speech was that of J. Sloat Fassett of New York, who adjured the Republicans to name the whole committee without regard to Democratic selections.

"This is a Republican cleaning," said Mr. Fassett, "and the Democrats have nothing to do with it."

Speaker Cannon opposed any compromise.

"You've only got two propositions," said he, "either accept the Democratic selections or reject them."

When the caucus opened a notice from the Democratic caucus was read appraising the majority of the Democratic selection of James and Rainey. A motion by Douglas of Ohio to return the communication with the request that other Democrats be substituted was overwhelmingly voted down.

Representative Goebel of Ohio then offered a resolution naming the four Republicans and Representative Clayton and Lloyd as the Democratic members of the committee. Gardner of

UNIONISTS HAVE MADE NET GAIN OF 45 MEMBERS

Need 168 to Wipe Out Liberal Majority in the Last Parliament.

POPULAR VOTE IS CLOSE

Government Party Loses Seats Through Three-Cornered Contests.

LONDON, Jan 19.—All returns of today's elections likely to be received tonight show that the Unionists gained five seats and the Liberals one, leaving the present position of the parties as follows:

Unionists, 129; Liberals, 119; Laborites, 22, Nationalists, 44.

Thus far, therefore, the Unionists have a net gain of 45 seats. They are required to obtain at least 168 net gains to wipe out the Liberal majority in the last parliament.

The Liberals continue to lose through three-cornered fights, the Labor candidates invariably receiving just enough support to allow the Unionists to succeed. Already this has occurred in five constituencies, and there are 24 more thus threatened.

Judging from the returns received so far, if the Liberal, Laborite and Nationalist votes were grouped, there would be a considerable majority for the reform of the house of lords.

It is almost impossible at the present moment to guage popular feeling on home rule, for while Premier Asquith placed it in his platform, many Liberal candidates have been compelled to repudiate it. Practically all the Unionist candidates are tariff reformers, but some would hardly follow as far as the Chamberlainites would lead.

Of the elections for 81 members of the new parliament held in Great Britain today the result of less than half was announced tonight, the [illegible] districts. In London, where four boroughs polled, two remained to the Liberals and one to the Laborites, while the fourth went over to the Unionist side.

In northern England, the Liberals generally hold the seats won in 1906. This also is true of Scotland, but the midlands continue to go over to the party of tariff reform.

The Liberals also lost one of the boroughs of Glasgow.

The central division of Glasgow remains in the Unionist fold. The Black Friars division of Glasgow is again in the Labor column.

Glasgow, Tradeston, goes over to the Liberals. The divisions of Glasgow, including St. Rollox, gave increased majorities for the government.

Nottingham, like all the midland towns, shows a strong partiality for tariff reform.

Yorkshire, Lancashire and Scottish divisions, from which returns have been received, continue their allegiance to the Liberal party.

How closely the Unionists are fighting their opponents is shown by the following figures of the aggregate polling to date:

Unionists vote, 1,390 298; Liberals, 1,224,878; Laborites, 263,463; Socialists, 16,271.

TURKISH PARLIAMENT BUILDING IS BURNED.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 19.—The palace of Charagan, where the Turkish parliament meets, was entirely destroyed by fire today. The loss is great, as the building alone cost about $16,000,000.

The few effects that were saved were taken from the palace by sailors stationed at the legations, principally Russians and Americans who were first to arrive on the scene.

Superstitious Orientals regard the fire as an evil omen.

WILL IT COME TO THIS?

BRITISH ELECTION WILL MAKE HISTORY

CHANGE IN CONSTITUTION IS INVOLVED.

Power of House of Lords Will Be Either Augmented or Curtailed by the Result.

By Frederic J. Haskin

I.—AN EPOCH-MARKING CAMPAIGN.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The general parliamentary election now in progress in England is in many respects the most important political campaign since the ballot-box was invented. The peculiar issues involved are such that whatever the result of the voting, the constitution of the British empire will be radically changed. Usually it is impossible to weigh the importance of a political campaign in advance; but from the first it has been known here that a Liberal victory would mean the reduction of the power of the house of lords to the extent that it might not veto or amend bills affecting revenues, and that a Conservative victory would mean that the power of the house of lords would be augmented and that of the house of commons reduced to a point aproximating the condition of affairs before the Revolution under Oliver Cromwell.

Here England decides whether it will adopt the newest notions of political reform and advance toward socialism, or whether it will return to a more pronouncedly individualistic system. The campaign was the most exciting that England has ever known—far more "fast and furious" than any campaign the United States ever has known. The most important reason for the unprecedented interest in this particular campaign is the fact that there was a real, living, burning issue. At the beginning of the campaign this issue of the people against the peers was clear-cut, and it was sufficient to get the country thoroughly awake. Then other questions were injected, until, at the close the speakers were compelled to discuss many side issues, each of overwhelming importance. Seldom has so much been crowded into one campaign, never has so much depended on the result of an election.

Budget Causes Trouble

To begin at the beginning The Liberal party came into power in 1906 by an overwhelming majority. It attempted to legislate along "progressive" lines but its great majority in the house of commons was of no account when the house of lords could veto or emasculate every measure. The house of lords is always overwhelmingly Conservative. The first prime minister Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman died, and was succeeded by Mr. Herbert H. Asquith, the present premier. Mr. David Lloyd-George became chancellor of the exchequer a position which amounts if transferred to the United States to a combination of all the power held by the secretary of the treasury Speaker Cannon Senator Aldrich and Chairman Tawney of the house committee on appropriations.

President Taft yesterday reappointed Alexander J. Strachan postmaster of Colorado Springs for a term of four years. The appointment was sent to the Senate, it is practically certain of confirmation.

Mr. Strachan was first appointed postmaster by President Roosevelt four years ago and has made a splendid record. Under his direction, the business of the office has increased, and residents of this city have received a most satisfactory mail service. WALSH IN PRISON IS "CONVICT 6861"

30TH MEMBER OF BANKERS' COLONY AT LEAVENWORTH.

Aged Financier Bears Up Bravely But Does Not Expect to Live Out His Sentence.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Jan. 19.—John R. Walsh, who today began serving a five-year sentence for misapplying the funds of the Chicago National bank, has accepted his new situation with smiling good grace. He is outspoken in his approval of the kindly manner in which he has been treated since his arrival at noon today.

Tonight it became known that while Mr. Walsh was talking in private with an old friend whom he has known for half a century, he remarked, sadly:

"I don't believe I shall ever live out my sentence if I am not pardoned."

The new surroundings did not make Mr. Walsh—who is now known as "convict 6861"—nervous. He sat calmly in his cell tonight and read until the big gong sounded "lights out" at 9 o'clock. Then he disrobed and retired. When a guard passed the cell a few minutes later, the ex-banker was sleeping peacefully.

When the convicted banker was shown his cell, he asked several questions about the rules governing his incarceration.

"Just tell me what to do, and I will do it," he said. "If I violate any rules, I assure you it will be through ignorance only."

Many persons who saw the convicted financier enter the prison today with sprightly step and smiling countenance predicted a relapse would follow when he was settled inside the walls.

Warden R. W. McClaughry, an old personal friend of Mr. Walsh, after talking with him tonight, said:

"He will probably be able to take up some regular employment in a few days."

Within 20 minutes after the warden's office had been reached, the preliminary arrangements for Walsh's beginning his sentence had been made. He shook hands with his son, John W. Walsh, his son-in-law, Dr. L. Blake Baldwin, his attorney, L. C. Ritcher and United States Marshals Hoy and Middleton, who accompanied him.

"Goodby," he said, firmly, and then turned to the warden as a signal that he was ready to begin his sentence. His photograph was taken. As he is in poor health Mr. Walsh was sent to the hospital for observation. He will remain there for several days until he is fully recovered, when if he is able to work he will be assigned to duty in the prison library.

His duties in the library will be those of [illegible] clerk to the librarian, Chaplain Frank [illegible] in the work of overhauling and re-cataloguing the books. As there are over 7,000 volumes to be handled the work promises to be no easy task but it is believed that it will prove congenial to the prisoner, who is a great reader.

Walsh makes the thirtieth member of the famous bankers' colony in the penitentiary.

L. PAULHAN STARTLES THE WORLD OF AVIATION

Carries Passenger on Five Different Flights in One Afternoon.

NEW WORLD'S RECORD

Frenchman Takes His Wife on 22-Mile Ride Flies Over Surf.

AVIATION FIELD, LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19. By carrying one passenger in his biplane on a 22-mile cross-country trip from Aviation filed to a point half a mile out over the ocean and taking another passenger on a 12-mile flight over the fields, and three other passengers, one at a time, on short flights, Louis Paulhan today established a new world's record for heavier-than-air machines.

No other aviator has taken up so many passengers in one day and no other aviator has taken a woman for a high flight over fields and woods and villages and surf for more than 20 miles. Paulhan sailed at an altitude of from 500 to 1,000 feet over Redondo Beach, Venice-by-the-Sea and other resorts toward point Firmin. There were no life buoys tied to the machine to save them from death in the waves should they fall. He made the trip and the other perilous flights of the afternoon with the ease of a run in a taxicab.

The passenger carrying record is held by Orville Wright, who flew with Captain Englehardt for one hour and 35 minutes at Berlin last fall, but Wright did not leave the course, where he could land at will.

Paulhan was gone 33 minutes on his 22-mile trip. He had as passenger his wife. His 12-mile trip was made with Clifford B. Harmon of New York. Besides these he took up Mrs. Cortlandt F. Bishop, wife of President Bishop of the Aero club of America, Lieut. Paul Beck of the United States army signal corps, William Randolph Hearst, the newspaper publisher, and another newspaper man.

Lieutenant Beck, on his trip, took dummy dynamite bombs to attempt to throw them from a height to a measured place on the ground.

While Beck was not successful in placing the bombs within the square he did not land far away and it was demonstrated that the aeroplane could be used for such a purpose and that it was a matter of practice only in placing the bombs where wanted.

The other aviators did not accomplish much. Charles K. Hamilton made three starts in an attempt to lower Paulhan's altitude record of 4,165 feet. On his first flight Hamilton rose 456 feet on his second 300 feet and on his third approximately 700 feet. Paulhan on the seashore exceeded this without any effort at record breaking. Hamilton's machine was not working well enough to encourage him to go higher.

The Gill-Dosch machine met with an accident that eliminates it from any work tomorrow. This is an American machine owned by H. W. Gill of Baltimore. It has been tested out several times but each time it has met with trouble. This time the trouble was serious. At a height of from 30 to 100 feet it circled the field once and then came down with a crash that wrecked its left plane. Beachey, the driver, was not injured.

Glenn H. Curtiss made two appearances. The first time he went around the course three times and the second time he tried for a speed record. His lap was 2:19, seven seconds from the record.

Tomorrow is the last day of the meet.

After the meet Paulhan, it was given out by his manager tonight, will go to San Francisco. He will make several flights there if the weather permits. From there he will start on a trip around the world. Hamilton may attempt the flight from here to San Diego for which San Diego business men have offered a prize of $1,200.

MEASURE TO LICENSE REALTY DEALERS REFERRED

Many Speakers at State Session and Banquet in Evening. Ball Follows.

ABOUT 200 ARE PRESENT

After Meeting This Morning Delegates Will Visit Colorado College and Other Places.

Members of the Colorado Realty Dealers association, whose winter quarterly meeting opened here yesterday and will close this afternoon, lost no time in getting down to business. Trains from all points in the state brought visitors to Colorado Springs yesterday morning, and by 2 o'clock in the afternoon they had assembled in the Council chamber in the city hall, and within a few minutes were deep in the discussion of the most important issue of the conference, the question of whether an effort shall be made to secure the adoption of a law placing all real estate dealers of the state under a bond of $10,000 and licensing their business.

Some diversity of opinion was manifested, but on a whole the members present, of whom there were about 200, stood solidly for the recommendation of a law of this character, and the subject was finally placed in the hands of a committee for revision before the next meeting, three months hence. In making his appointment, President W. W. Williamson, of this city, stated that inasmuch as the movement started with the local Real Estate exchange, he would name a committee of members of this organization, and the names of those who constituted the committee on arrangements of the conference were announced. They are: Mrs. Osie Kramer, chairman; A. P. Martin, Miles Cook, A. B Williams and J. F. Thomas. Just what alterations are to be made will rest with the committee. The suggestion was made, and probably will be complied with, that letters bearing upon the subject be sent to all members of the organization toward the end of a general expression of opinion upon the subject.

Close on the heels of this session, an elaborate banquet was given at the Antlers hotel at 6 15 o'clock in the evening, at which several brilliant addresses were made. It was also attended by the ladies. Dancing followed.

The question as to the next meeting place was brought up at the afternoon meeting, but as no invitation was forthcoming, the question was laid on the table until this morning's session. A committee on resolutions, consisting of W. R. Given of Denver, Fred R.

STATES' RIGHT TO CONTROL WATER POWER ASSERTED BY GOVERNORS AT CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—State's rights was the burden of most of the addresses delivered at the conference of governors today with particular reference to the conservation of resources and the regulation of public service corporations.

A feature of the afternoon session was a speech by Ambassador Bryce who believed the conference would emphasize the importance of the governorship and that the chief executive of each state was coming more and more to be looked upon as the personal representative of the people of his state.

Governor Willson of Kentucky declared the state had the right to control over water power and that the federal government did not have a scintilla of right [illegible].

Governor Hughes of New York considered the forests among the state's most precious possessions and said the state so far as [illegible] could should own and preserve them. He advocated the development and state control of water power.

Governor Brooks of Wyoming addressing the conference on the subject of water power, said the industrial energy should rest in the state.

Governor Shafroth of Colorado read statistics to show the magnitude of the value of the water power of the country and the great possibilities of its development. He contended that the ownership of land by the federal government in a state was a property right and not political nor governmental; that the United States holds the lands the same as an individual and that the government of the land rests in the state.

Governor Eberhart of Minnesota introduced resolutions defining the jurisdiction of the state and federal [illegible] in matters involving [illegible]

The two sessions today were followed by a dinner at the White House tonight.

GOV. HUGHES ADVISES INSURANCE OFFICERS TO KEEP THEIR HANDS OFF LEGISLATURES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—At the third annual meeting of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents today, Governor Hughes of New York addressed the executive officers of life insurance companies, representing 20,000,000 policyholders and nearly $4,000,000,000 of assets and declared his faith in life insurance as an American institution. He insisted that no life insurance organization that is honest and economical in its management need fear state control or expect to suffer from legislation.

On the subject of legislative corruption he said:

"I hope the time has gone by when it will be thought necessary to protect the interests of life insurance policyholders by efforts to corrupt legislatures. Publicity, discussion, full understanding of what you have in view and what is essential to the proper conduct of this business—those are your guarantees and those are the securities of the policyholders you represent.

"You are not handling your own business but the savings of the people. You are not responsible for legislation and you have no duty in any way, by any method, which will not stand full and public discussion, to thwart any attack upon the interests committed to your care."

The governor declared he believed that extension of national activities would be needed soon to meet the increasing population but, referring to the expressed desire of some of the insurance officials to bring the companies under control of the federal government, he believed that would not be possible in the face of the decision of the supreme court of the United States.

BRITISH ELECTION WILL MAKE HISTORY

try. This budget goes into effect as law on the day it is introduced in the house of commons It is just as if Secretary MacVeagh had the power to draw up a bill fixing all taxation, including the tariff, and making all appropriations, including fixed charges upon future administrations, and that such a bill would become law at the moment it was transmitted to Congress However, the budget, although already in effect, must be passed by parliament and approved by the king The king's approval is purely perfunctory, as the crown has not exercised the right of veto since the days of Queen Anne

The budget introduced on April 29, 1909, is the cause of all the trouble It provided for the revolutionary process of taxing land values After much stormy debate it was passed by the house of commons by a huge majority and sent to the house of lords That body on November 30, 1909, rejected and vetoed the budget, in effect, by adopting an amendment to it declaring "that this house is not justified in giving its consent to this bill until it has been submitted to the judgment of the country " This action was taken by a vote of 350 to 75 Whereupon the campaign was on

Some understanding of the nature of the British constitution, and of the sharp practice by politicians of both Liberal and Conservative parties, is necessary to explain this crisis. The British constitution is not a written document like that of the United States, but is the collection of governmental precedents from early times until the present. Since the re-establishment of English affairs after the Cromwell revolution the house of lords, under the accepted constitution, has had no right to reject or materially to amend revenue bills The budget has been exclusively the work of the house of commons, and the assent of the lords has been given just as the perfunctory aproval of the king is required.

The Liberal government was unable to pass its proposed "progressive" legislation in separate bills, so the whole social reform scheme was tied up with revenue measures and introduced in the budget. In this form the budget might have been open to the charge of containing extraneous matter of legislation not strictly in the revenue class a system of legislation formerly common in the United States when "riders" were attached to appropriation bills. In England the system is called "tacking."

The lords might have objected to the budget on this score, but the quarrel then would have been indeterminate. They did not dare to undertake a step so revolutionary as to reject the bill in toto. The "referendum" amendment was the result. By its adoption the house of lords admitted that the social reform measures in the budget were "in order" and not subject to the charge of "tacking." The lords also forced a dissolution and asked for an election. For more than a century the power to dissolve parliament has not been exercised by the lords.

Avoid the Issue.

The campaign began with this clear-cut issue: Has or has not the house of commons the sole control of the purse-strings of the nation as exercised since the days of Cromwell? The Liberals declared in the affirmative, accused the lords of defying the constitution and asked the people to return the Liberal government and to limit the power of the lords. The Conservatives, on the other hand, did not meet the issue squarely, but set up the claim that the amendment by the lords was not a rejection but a referendum to the people. Beneath this quibble, however, the Conservatives were stirred to mighty effort and the Peers, themselves, awoke to action such as they have not dreamed of in two hundred years

With one of the great parties thus unwilling to meet the issue which caused the election, it was inevitable that the waters should become muddied The Conservatives, led by the former Prime Minister Mr. Arthur J Balfour of the house of commons, and by Lord Landsdowne of the Peers, offered tariff reform, meaning protection instead of free trade, as a substitute for all the relief offered in the Lloyd-George budget, and proceeded to make their campaign upon that issue. In addition, they charged that the Liberal government had failed to provide for the adequate defense of the nation against what they declare to be an imminent attack by Germany.

Make Tariff Reform an Issue.

Thus the two parties went to the country Premier Asquith leading the Liberals, although all but overshadowed by the great Lloyd-George, in the defense of the budget and in the attack upon the house of lords, endeavored to keep the original issue clearly before the people The lords and the Conservatives, who forced the referendum on that issue themselves under the leadership of Mr Balfour sought to place the emphasis upon tariff reform Mr Balfour has a record of many years as a free trader and also as a severe critic of the house of lords so that his part in the campaign was most difficult But he was thoroughly in earnest in opposition to the land tax and land valuation features of the budget and he used the best weapons at hand with which to fight If the campaign could have been kept to the issue upon which the referendum was taken, there would never have been a doubt of a sweeping Liberal victory and the practical abolition of the house of lords. The Conservatives were forced by the law of self-preservation to bring in the tariff reform issue.

The Liberals tell the people that they suffer because the land is held by a few men who do not use it to the best advantage, and that these land-owners must share in the burdens of public taxation. The Conservatives tell the people that free trade has brought them to their low estate and that if they will adopt a protective tariff there will be work for all the unemployed, a job for every man, and that the foreigner will pay the taxes to run the government. To American ears the campaign is strangely familiar.

Not least among the interesting features of this remarkable campaign is that both parties have gone to the United States for precedents and examples to prove their causes The Liberals have pointed out that all land is taxed in America, and the Conservatives have retorted with the amazing discovery that the land tax has kept down the price of real estate in Boston. The Conservatives have pointed to the high wages and prosperity of American workingmen as the product of the protective tariff, and the Liberals have retorted with the price of butter and eggs in Kansas City. Thomas Jefferson is quoted in attacking the house of lords, and Alexander Hamilton is brought forth to defend that institution. Mother England seems quite ready to learn something from the Yankees, but at the same time she has much to teach the United States about the business of conducting campaigns and managing elections.

CATTLE SUPPLY SHORT

Colonel Skinner Quotes Government Statistics in Proof of His Assertion.

DENVER, Jan. 19.—Col. W. E. Skinner, manager of the Western Stock show, today gave out a statement, compiled from the United States government's figures, to verify his assertaion that the cattle supply of this country is not equal to the demands. The statement follows:

Comparative statements for the years 1907 and 1909, compiled by the federal government, follow:

	1907	1909
Cattle imported	$8[illegible],000	$1,573,000
Cattle exported	29,086,000	12,992,000
Meats—Beef and beef products exported	22,986,000	16,046,000

Government inspection of five big packing houses showed supply of beef on hand, April 1, 1909, 330,254,000 pounds.

Supply on hand, November 1, 1909, 59,473,000 pounds.

Normal beef supply, which should have been on hand, January 1, 1910, in packing houses, 400,000,000 pounds

Actually on hand (estimated), 85,000,000 pounds

Cattle slaughtered in 1907, 7,631,717, in 1909, 7,825,337

Calves slaughtered in 1907, 1,763,574, in 1909, 2,046 713

These figures show, according to Colonel Skinner, that the increased slaughter of calves means that the nation is drawing on the beef supply of the future in order to meet the present demand for consumption, as the production of cattle is falling off

POOL IS SMASHED AND BROKERS FAIL

HOCKING COAL BREAKS OVER 60 POINTS.

Two Stock Exchange Firms Ruined by Failure of Speculators to Make Good Margins.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—There was an episode in the New York stock exchange today that was more spectacular in many respects than the recent Rock Island fiasco. With a break of more than 60 points, the so-called Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron pool was smashed, two stock exchange houses were forced to suspend, and the market generally underwent severe decline. Total sales aggregated 1,484,400 shares. A rigid inquiry by the governors of the exchange will probably be the aftermath.

The firms involved are J. M. Fiske and company of 42 Broadway and Lathrop, Haskins and company of 60 Broadway. The failure of both was caused by the collapse of the pool and involuntary petitions in bankruptcy were filed against both this afternoon.

In the case of J. M. Fiske and company the liabilities of the firm are placed by creditors at $750,000, with assets of $400,000. Counsel for the firm, however, estimated the liabilities at $3,500,000 at the close of business on Tuesday afternoon, with assets of $2,900,000. He did not estimate the firm's financial resources after today's developments.

In the petition against the firm, creditors alleged preferential transfer of property to one or more creditors, and further charged that the alleged bankrupts permitted a considerable portion of their property "to be concealed or removed, with interest to hinder, delay and defraud creditors."

Judge Hand, in the United States district court, appointed a receiver tonight.

Assets and liabilities are not stated in the petition filed against Lathrop, Haskins and company, although it is alleged that the claims of creditors on stock accounts aggregate $16,200. Admission of insolvency is also alleged. No receiver has been appointed for this firm tonight.

The collapse in the pool today was brought about primarily by the refusal of banks to make further advances on the stock as collateral and the inability or failure of those who were long of it to make good impaired margins. The suspension of the two firms most vitally concerned was therefore a natural result. Several individuals also are said to have lost heavily.

In all about 45,000 shares of Columbus and Hocking changed hands at a range of from 88½ to 25. The stock closed at 33, a net loss of 54¼ points. The entire market closed weak with prices at low ebb

With the breaking of the pool there were reports of an immediate investigation into the operations by the stock exchange authorities. This was officially denied, but it seems more than likely that circumstances will force the exchange to take some cognizance of the matter. In fact some of the principals of the pool were before the governors today and an authoritative statement on the matter probably will be issued tomorrow.

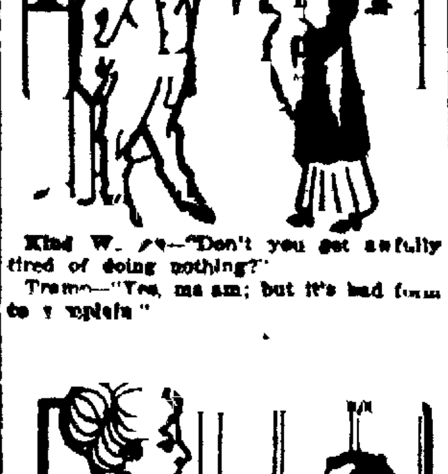

According to common belief, James R. Keene was active in the market movement of Columbus and Hocking. Some of his associates said, however, that the Keene interest in the stock had been withdrawn some time ago. The pool had been in existence about a year.

United States Steel was the feature of the market today in point of activity. Trading in this stock totaled 361,000 shares, or approximately 25 per cent of the day's business.

It was reported tonight that two other stock exchange firms would be forced to suspend tomorrow.

FAVORS UNIFORMITY IN STATE LAWS

CIVIC FEDERATION ADOPTS RESOLUTIONS.

Proposes Co-operation in Regulation of Water Power and Conservation of Forests.

WASHINGTON, Jan 19.—Agreeing that there should be uniformity in state laws affecting not only commercial matters but likewise those that pertain to the well being of the individual, the National Civic federation, at its final session today, adopted resolutions recommending uniform laws for the protection of children employed in industries, a uniform insurance code and uniform legislation on the subject of gathering information of vital statistics

The conference further adopted a resolution recommending to the governors of the several states, now meeting in this city and to the states themselves, that working men's compensation acts, fair to the employer and employes, be uniformly substituted for the present system of employers' liability

A resolution was passed recommending to the respective states consideration of the development of water power and its regulation on non-navigable streams with a view to bringing about uniformity of state legislation looking to uniform co-operation between states and the federal government.

Conservation of forests on the same lines was also strongly indorsed.

The conference authorized the appointment of a committee of 15 on reform in legal procedure for the purpose of co-operating with a similar committee of the American Bar association.

Frederick L. Hoffman of New Jersey, speaking on the subject of "Uniform State Statistics," startled the conference. He declared that the historical nation was dying out and that when the blood which made the revolution possible becomes mixed with foreign blood there is but one result—decay.

George L. Douglas, of the Proprietary Association of America, speaking of the National food and drug act, said that its keynote was "thou shalt not lie." He thought it was a righteous law.

"What a great thing it would be" he said, "if we had a similar law, applicable to boots, shoes, dry goods, stocks, bonds, newspaper orations, and many other things. Why should veracity be encouraged in the food trade only?"

W. B. Breed, of the National Wholesale Grocers association, spoke upon the needs of a uniform law relating to food and drugs.

RAINEY IS REJECTED

Massachusetts, an insurgent, offered a substitute providing for the naming of only the four Republicans and leaving the two Democratic places open. After a lengthy debate this was defeated, 104 to 62.

Insurgents Leave Caucus.

At this juncture Representative Cooper and his insurgent colleagues left the caucus.

A motion to substitute James for Clayton, made by Representative Morse of Wisconsin, was adopted by a vote of 93 to 64. The two Democratic selections were then ratified by a vote of 105 to 4.

Just before the final ballot, Representative Ames of Massachusetts moved to substitute the names of Champ Clark, the minority leader, and Representative Underwood, the Democratic whip, for those of James and Lloyd but this was defeated by a practically unanimous vote

All the insurgent members of the House were present at the caucus. The applause was frequent during the speeches and at times the pounding on the desks and the handclapping could be heard out in the corridors. Several speeches were made in opposition to the naming of the Democrats in a Republican caucus. It was stated after the caucus that Representative Cooper was supported in this stand by several "regular" Republicans. The overwhelming majority, however, was in favor of dictating the personnel of the whole committee, thus indicating that when the matter comes to the floor of the House tomorrow there will in all probability be ample votes to carry the ticket through over any combined Democratic and insurgent objection.

President Taft today signed the joint resolution for the Ballinger-Pinchot inquiry.

BEGINS INVESTIGATION OF HITCHCOCK'S CHARGE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The House committee on expenditures of the interior department today began an investigation of the charges made by Representative Hitchcock that the $15,000,000 fund to protect the public domain from frauds had been improperly used by the general land office, in the matter of buying expensive furniture, employment of useless clerks and the doubling of salaries of clerks

Land Commissioner Dennett was the first witness. He explained to the committee when asked about the statement that part of the fund had been used to pay tolls on newspaper articles sent to the commissioner, that he was able to find but two such dispatches The Western Union Telegraph company had been notified that such messages were not official business and could not be charged to the fund in question

Commissioner Dennett when asked by Congressman Lafean to explain about the charge of appointing inefficient clerks, said that it was not improbable that a few inefficient men might have been appointed The civil service commission wished him to select special agents from the commission's list, which he declined to do because he could not get the class of men he wanted, those being western and not eastern men

He declared in answer to the criticisms made by Representative Hitchcock that Secretary Ballinger is authorised by law to appoint special agents and fix their salaries

Defends Increase of Salary

The doubling of the salary of Mr Schwartz to $4,200 and a payment of a higher salary to Schwartz's messenger than to any other messengers were defended by Mr Dennett, who quoted Assistant Attorney General Purdy as saying,"Schwartz was worth $500,000 a year as a lawyer" The work allotted to Mr Schwartz's messenger, he said, was unusually hard

As to the four score additional clerks charged to the million dollar fund, Mr. Dennett cited an opinion of the comptroller of the treasury as justifying such use of the apropriation and said that non-employment of these clerks would have glutted the office work and retarded operations directly under the appropriation.

Ballinger Will Send Letter.

The committee adjourned at noon until Monday

Secretary Ballinger will not appear but will probably send a letter to the committee

The charge as to 'Jack Ballinger being paid traveling expenses was not brought up today The employes of the interior department specifically mentioned in the charges will be asked to appear Monday Commissioner Dennett told the committee today that he would have no objection to their testifying

While wishing to interrogate and believing he can bring out some important facts, Mr Hitchcock does not wish to appear in the role of a prosecuting attorney as he believes the investigating function rests with the committee. He believes the investigation will show the existence of two systems of appointment, promotion and dismissal, in the land office one operating under the classified service restrictions and the other operating at will under a special appropriation fund

DEMANDS INVESTIGATION OF BRIBERY ACCUSATION

ALBANY, N Y Jan 19.—In the presence of one of the largest audiences ever gathered in the Senate chamber, Jotham P Auld president pro tem, and Republican leader on the floor branded the charge of Senator Conger that during his career as assemblyman, he had accepted bribes to influence legislation, as a lie, and demanded an investigation The matter will be formally taken up tomorrow

MEASURE TO LICENSE REALTY DEALERS

Berbower of Cripple Creek and R. J. Bruner of Pueblo, was appointed, and will probably report today.

Afternoon Session.

President Williamson opened the business session yesterday afternoon. The speakers were: Edward W. Kent president of the Colorado Springs Exchange; C. E. Wantland and W. L. Clayton, both of Denver and A. P. Martin and John Murphy, both of Colorado Springs.

President W. F. Slocum of Colorado College appeared before the delegates and extended an invitation to them to visit the college. It was accepted, and the visitors will go there this afternoon.

In his address of welcome to the visitors, Mr. Kent said that he knows of no body of men whom Colorado Springs could welcome more cordially than the real estate men, as no men as a class do more to develop a community.

"Wide awake," he said, "energetic, they are veritable live wires, potent with energy and needing only a proper contact, which such an occasion as this offers, to accomplish large results. They must be men of great faith and unquestioned veracity."

He expressed regret that their visit in the city must necessarily be so brief, saying:

"But after it is all over, and we have shaken hands and bade you goodby, and you have all returned to your homes throughout the state, we hope that you and we will have only the happiest recollections of your brief sojourn in the little city under the shadow of the Peak."

W. S. Pershing of Limon, Colo., who was to have spoken on "Dry Farming," was prevented from attending, and the subject was presented by C. E. Wantland of Denver, who was introduced by President Williamson as probably the foremost authority upon the subject in the United States.

Mr. Wantland opened with a brief history of the development of dry farming in Colorado, and told of the steps leading up to the presentation of the project to eastern farmers.

"We took a long shot," he said; "we concluded that dry farming is a fact, and a fad."

The attitude taken by the speaker is that the farming land of the state is being wasted to a considerable extent through being filed upon by persons having little or no knowledge of farming. He said that in spite of the homestead right, he believes that it would be better for the state if inexperienced men should not be allowed to locate on government land. That dry farming will mean much to real estate men of Colorado, and particularly Colorado Springs, was another prediction of Mr. Wantland.

Agents Get $100,000,000.

"I know myself," he said; "of $100,000,000 that has been put into the hands of city real estate men as a result of dry farming sales which my agents have made.

"I was greatly disappointed to see dry farming omitted in the recent report made by President Lory of the State Agricultural college. He is present, and I am saying this to his face. His reason probably was that he was ashamed of the fact that the college did not have sufficient funds to work with."

According to Mr. Wantland, the territory between Cheyenne Wells and Denver is the most important dry farming section of the state, and he predicted that Colorado Springs real estate dealers will reap large rewards from the industry.

"All, in my judgment, rests with dry farming," concluded Mr. Wantland. "Colorado now owns but 5,000,000 acres of land, and there is no telling what this is worth. It means a whole lot to the state. If your assistance can be had, if the men of the state will gather around the State Agricultural college, and see that dry farming is carried on on a firm, scientific basis and not as an experiment, and that experiment stations are established in every county and ask for larger appropriations for the college, there is a very promising outlook ahead."

Mr. Clayton read the proposed bill, which was drafted by former State Senator Arthur Cornforth, at the instance of the Colorado Springs Real Estate exchange, and discussed it from various standpoints. He stated that, while he is heartily in favor of the proposed measure, he is doubtful whether the $10,000 bond clause will ever pass the state legislature, and it was mainly because of his expressions upon the subject that a committee on revision was appointed, as mentioned above.

Modify Bill.

"My opinion," he said, "is that you would have to modify this bill before you get it passed by the Colorado state legislature. If introduced in its present form, the cry is sure to be raised that an attempt is being made to create a realty trust.

"There are many who cannot furnish a bond to the tune of $10,000. However, what you want to impress on the members of the legislature is the fact that you want to protect the public. This can be effected by the licensing of the real estate dealer and then having his license revoked if he does not follow the narrow path.

"A point which it seems to me should be made clear in this bill is what defines a real estate broker or agent. Who is going to say what a real estate broker or agent is? You might define that and pass a law accordingly. The subject ought to be treated thoroughly and completely."

Mr. Clayton also called attention to the fact that possible fear of placing such authority in the hands of a state officer is more imaginary than real. As an example he cited the case of the state insurance law, saying that, while it is so simple that it might be void to put anybody every man in the state out of business, only one man was actually put out of business.

"There are 362 insurance licenses in the state," he said, "giving the holders the privilege to sell insurance for any company, and 12,000 solicitors' licenses. Last year only three licenses were revoked. Twenty complaints were made, but in most cases I simply gave the culprits a good talk, and told them to go and sin no more. Of the three whose licenses were revoked, two were reinstated, so there is only one out of business now.

"I would suggest that your bill provide that the insurance commissioner, and not the secretary of state, issue these licenses. I don't say this because I hold that office, for I do not expect to have it after the end of this term, and the law, if enacted, would not go into effect until after that time. The result is that the secretary of state has a great deal to do as it is, and by putting the matter in the hands of the insurance commissioner, it would be given to some one who could specialize on the work."

Mr. Murphy was scheduled to recite some of the disadvantages that would result in the bonding of real estate men. He chose, however, to treat the subject with an essay which served as a strong, favorable argument.

Mr. Martin spoke in favor of the proposed measure, and was of the belief that it would serve to elevate the real estate business, as well as to protect the client.

After a business session, as previously mentioned, the delegates adjourned for the afternoon.

The Banquet.

R. L. Holland of this city, who was to have presided as toastmaster at the banquet at the Antlers, was unable to attend, and his place was filled by former Senator Cornforth. The other speakers were Mayor H. F. Avery of Colorado Springs, J. E. Campbell, W. D. Kent and former Governor Alva Adams all of Pueblo, Charles A. Lory, president of the Colorado State Agricultural college at Fort Collins and two others who were not on the program, but asked for the privilege of speaking. One of these, Mr. Kent proposed an eloquent toast to the ladies which was drunk by the men of the association, standing, and the other, Mrs. Kramer who responded on behalf of the ladies with a few remarks, and the quotation of a poem by James Barton Adams.

Mayor H. F. Avery extended the welcome of the city to the guests in a few well-chosen words, and J. E. Campbell of Pueblo replied on behalf of the out-of-town members.

Former Governor Adams gave an eloquent address on the prosaic subject, "Potatoes and Civilization," in which there was not a prosaic sentence. He treated the theme exhaustively, beginning with the discovery of the potato by mankind, and ending by predicting that the day is not far distant when the humble tubers will furnish the alcohol of commerce. He spoke of the excellent qualities of this vegetable an important product of Colorado, and made the statement that there is not a mortgage on an arable piece of land in the state which cannot be raised by willingness to work and the knowledge of potato raising. Excerpts from his address follows:

"Every real estate man should study the spud question. With every farm or piece of land he sells, he should give instruction as to raising potatoes. A book of information should go with every deed, especially to a new citizen, just as the automobile agent gives a book of instructions to the buyer of a machine.

"The duty of a real estate agent should not end with the sale of the land and the banking of his commission. He should assist the buyer of every acre of land to a knowledge of its possibilities, and how to profit by them. Ignorance and incompetency is the greatest burden of our agricultural interests. Incompetency is the rock upon which half the ventures of the world are wrecked. To protect against rascality there are courts, jails and police, but against stupidity and ignorance there is no defense, and the smartest are helpless."

President Lory's Address.

President Lory of the State Agricultural college reviewed the work which that institution is accomplishing both toward educating the young men in scientific agriculture and trying to persuade those on farms to remain in the farming industry, and in the dissemination of literature and more substantial aid to the farmers of the state. He urged the members of the association to send to the college the names of any who may purchase land to farm, in order that the assistance of this department of the state government may be offered, and requested that the real estate men of Colorado urge the legislature to make more liberal appropriations.

"Help us and we will help you," he said; "it is a mutual undertaking. The extension work we are accomplishing among the farmers will be a source of income to you."

W. D. Kerr of Pueblo spoke on "The Association; Its Advantages and Benefits."

"The real estate dealers march in the van of progress," he said, "the real estate man's mission is to plan, and not to build. He is optimistic, and sees no failure ahead. It is for us to choose our course, and, with the dynamic force of our organization, to succeed in whatever we have undertaken."

Both at the afternoon business session and at the banquet last night, a campaign for an increased membership was urged.

Today's Program.

Today's session will open at 9:30 o'clock in the morning, and a number of important subjects are to be acted upon. Officers will not be elected at this meeting, as the annual convention of the organization will not take place for three months.

The program is as follows:

"Eighteenth National Irrigation Congress," J. H. McCorkle, Pueblo.

"San Luis Valley," Hon. Franklin E. Brooks, Colorado Springs.

Five-minute "boost" talks.

"Colorado Springs," H. C. Hall.

"Colorado City," John B. Stephen.

"Manitou," E. E. Nichols.

Suggestive topics for general discussion: "Printing of By-Laws," "Association Emblem," "Giving Association Members Preference Over Other Dealers," "Bonding." Any topic of vital importance to real estate dealers that may be suggested.

After the business session this morning, it is probable that the delegates will spend the afternoon and the next two or three days sightseeing in the Pikes Peak region.

Stomach Cleanser and Gas Absorbent

Charcoal Is the Greatest and Most Reliable Remedy for the Cure of Flatulence in Any Form.

A Trial Package of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges Sent Free.

In the whole domain of medicine there is no remedy that equals charcoal when it comes to absorbing gas of every kind, and in cleansing the alimentary tract of disease germs, toxic poisons and effete matters.

Charcoal is thickly perforated with tiny pores, so small that a magnifying glass of high power is required to discover them, and these millions of pores take up gases just as naturally and readily as a sponge takes up water. Its absorbing power is definitely known to be one hundred times its own volume in gases.

To illustrate this try placing a pan or other receptacle filled with charcoal in a room where disagreeable odors exist, and you will find that the atmosphere of that room will be purified in a few hours. This is often done in the dissecting rooms of hospitals and in chemical laboratories, and when left over night in a room freshly painted, the odor of the paint will be missing the next morning.

Its power of absorbing gases in the alimentary canal is just as pronounced as in the absorption of any and every kind of gases outside.

STUART'S CHARCOAL LOZENGES is a remedy for flatulence, colic, offensive breath and fermentation of food in the stomach, which contains medicinal charcoal made from fine young willow wands, mixed with pure, sweet honey, and in these lozenges charcoal is, for the first time, presented in a form entirely agreeable for administration.

The use of these gas-absorbing and purifying lozenges is applicable to all cases of stomach and intestinal indigestion, and when such symptoms are present as sour stomach, or acid fermentation, flatulence, eructations of gas, bloating of the stomach or bowels, bad breath, foul tongue, unpleasant taste in the mouth, sick headache caused by indigestion, biliousness, constipation, diarrhoea and torpid liver. Call on your druggist and purchase a box of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges for 25c if you are suffering from any of these complaints. Every druggist has them in stock, but should they offer you some other brand, don't accept it, but insist on having Stuart's as there are numerous inferior imitations on the market, which are being made from other than willow wood, that are likely to do the system more harm than good. Send your name and address to the F. A. Stuart Company, 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., for free sample.

GIVES FINAL DECISION ON NORTH POLE FAKE

University of Copenhagen Finds No Proof of Dr. Cook's Professions in His Note Book.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 19.—The committee of the University of Copenhagen has completed its examination of Dr. Frederick A. Cook's original notes and today confirmed its previous conclusions that not the slightest proof that the explorer reached the North pole had been submitted.

The committee finds the copy of Cook's data on which its previous decision was based conforms in the main to the original note book now in its possession. The latter, the examiners say, contains various alterations but there is nothing to show whether the changes were made with the purpose of deceiving.

While the consistory was unanimous in declaring Cook's claims were absolutely untrue, some of its members believe Cook is an honest man, though not a scientist.

Rector Solomonsen and Prof. Stromgren chairman of the examining committee, have been delegated further to consider all evidence at their disposal after which final action concerning the university's honoring of the explorer may be taken.

There were 470 boiler explosions in this country during 1908. There is one greater record. The fatalities numbered 251.

President Clowry Gives Figures Regarding Telegraph Business at Legislative Investigation.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—The name of William J. Conners of Buffalo, chairman of the Democratic state committee coupled with an alleged $2,000 stock transfer, brightened the proceedings today of the state legislative committee that is trying to determine the advisability of placing telegraph and telephone lines under the jurisdiction of the public service commission. In a letter addressed to the chairman of the committee, State Senator George A. Davis, James M. O'Grady of Rochester, N. Y. wants to know why Mr. Connors received from the promoters of an independent telephone company in Rochester $2,000 worth of stock, gratis, as was charged in testimony during recent litigation against the company.

The committee took the matter under advisement.

Col. Robert C. Clowry president of the Western Union Telegraph company, testified today that his company made an average profit of only 3½ cents per message during last year. The average price paid, he testified was 32 cents the average cost to the company 32½ cents.

"What is your opinion of the placing of public utilities under governmental and state control?" he was asked.

"I have not had experience in this line, but I would not object to reasonable control or regulation. The principle seems to me to be correct so far as our business is concerned," he replied.

$850,000 INVOLVED IN IN SUIT FOR ACCOUNTING

Chicago and Western Indiana Railroad Claims to Have Been Defrauded Through Conspiracy.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—Charges that Benjamin Thomas, former president of the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad, Charles R. Kappes, former real estate dealer for the railroad, and John Fetzer obtained at least $850,000 from the railroad through a real estate conspiracy, are made in a bill for an accounting filed in the circuit court today.

The bill was filed by the Chicago and Western Indiana Railroad company. According to the bill the real estate transactions occurred in 1906 and involved the expenditure of $2,521,888. The defendants are alleged to have divided the $850,000 profits.

When the railroad wished to acquire property, the bill says, Thomas would refer the matter to Kappes. Fetzer who was in the real estate business would be directed to make the purchase and the money would be turned over to him. Fetzer would make the purchase and report the amount paid, it is charged.

It is declared in the bill that in his report to the railroad company Fetzer would state a greater amount than he had paid. Then it is alleged, he would divide the difference between the price reported to the railroad and the real price with Thomas and Kappes.

The bill is sworn to by E. B. Prior, president of the railroad. In June, 1908, Thomas and Kappes resigned their positions with the railroad and it is alleged they destroyed or removed from the offices quantities of papers, books and documents relating to the transactions with Fetzer.

The court issued an injunction restraining the defendants from disposing of certain bonds which the bill alleges formed part of the profits of the land deals.

"WHY BE SO THIN?"

This Is Embarrassing, Unhealthy and Not Natural. Formula Now Used Which Adds From One to Ten Pounds a Week.

Every one ought to have some extra flesh on the bony structure of the body, both for the sake of health and self-esteem.

Every one pities a thin bony horse but horses don't know it—while thin people are both pitied and ridiculed. It ought not to be so, but it is.

A well rounded figure be it man or woman excites admiration not only for the figure but for the bright eyes, pink cheeks, red lips and vigorous carriage which accompany a well-nourished body.

Strength, health, beauty and sound flesh abound, if the blood and nerves get enough nourishment out of the food eaten.

This prescription aids nature helps absorption, digestion and assimilation, helps distribute the blood and nerve elements which make sound flesh. Get the ingredients and make it at home and see how very fast you gain in weight.

WARRANTS ARE READY

Steps Taken Preliminary to Arrest on Charge of Murder in Swope Case.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 19.—Warrants charging a Kansas City man with murdering Colonel Thomas H. Swope and his nephew, Chrisman Swope, were prepared today for the approval of Prosecuting Attorney Conkling. These warrants are to be held until a signal comes from Attorneys John H. Atwood and W. S. Fleming in Chicago awaiting the result of the chemical analysis now in progress. The warrants were ordered by John G. Paxton, attorney for the Swope estate, on his arrival from Chicago.

CHICAGO, Jan 19.—Professor Haines declared today that as yet there had been no poison discovered in the stomach of Colonel Swope.

"Our investigation has not reached the point where we can give out any findings," he said. "I do not expect to be through with the analysis until next week. It is an important case and I am attending to it personally."

DEFERS STATEHOOD FOR ANOTHER YEAR

SENATE HAS SUBSTITUTE FOR HOUSE BILL.

Postpones Election of Officers in New Mexico and Arizona Until 1911 With Taft's Permission.

WASHINGTON, Jan 19—No new stars will be added to the American flag before the summer of 1911 according to plan under consideration in the Senate committee on territories. The program is said to have the indorsement of President Taft. It provides for the reporting of an entirely new bill for the admission of New Mexico and Arizona as states.

The Hamilton bill which was passed by the House is declared to be objectionable to the Senate committee on two grounds. First, it does not provide for sufficient elapsed time between the proposed territorial elections for the adoption of constitutions and the election of state officers and members of the senate and house of representatives. The other objection relates to the protection of public interests in relation to existing and proposed land grants.

Under the terms of the Hamilton bill, elections of officials of the new states and representatives in Congress could be held immediately after state constitutions were adopted and approved by the President. The new bill will authorize New Mexico and Arizona to hold elections for the adoption of constitutions but no election for state officers and members of Congress can be held until after the constitutions have been approved by the President and Congress. The effect of this provision would be to permit the territories to hold constitutional conventions and elections for the adoption of the constitutions during the present year but the constitutions could not be ratified until Congress meets next December. After ratification the state elections could be held.

Under the terms of the proposed Senate bill the two territories could not possibly be admitted before the summer of 1911 The Republican members of the Senate committee headed by Senator Beveridge have conferred with President Taft and it is understood they are unanimously in favor of this program.

While the House was engaged today in an extended debate on the Mann "White Slave" bill, consideration of which will be resumed tomorrow, the Senate was doing quick work in disposing of the District of Columbia appropriation bill, carrying about $10,000,000.

The House also passed a resolution calling on the secretary of the navy to report whether during the present fiscal year, any powder has been bought from a trust.

The Alaskan legislative council bill was taken up in earnest by the Senate committee on territories today and Senator Beveridge hopes to be able to report it tomorrow or Friday. Senator Beveridge asserts that corporate interests in Alaska are so powerful they would be able to influence the election of a legislature favorable to them and he will take a firm stand in favor of the proposed council

The House committee on naval affairs voted unanimously today to report a bill abolishing the bureau of equipment of the navy. This is the first step by Congress in the inauguration of Secretary Meyer's plan for the reorganization of the navy department.

CURES CHRONIC ULCERS

There is nothing that causes more worry and discomfort than a chronic, festering ulcer As it lingers, slowly eating into the tissues and surrounding flesh, and by its tendency to grow worse in every way, it suggests the possibility of being cancerous in its nature. Efforts to heal the ulcer by means of salves, washes, lotions, etc., always result in failure, because such treatment can have no possible effect on the blood where the impurities and morbid matters form, and are carried through the circulation to the place, to keep it open, irritated and diseased. The impurities in the blood must be removed before the healing process can begin. S. S. S. goes to the fountain-head of the trouble, and drives out the germ-producing poisons and morbid impurities which keep the ulcer open. Then as this rich, purified blood is carried to the diseased place the healing commences, the inflammation gradually leaves, the discharge ceases, new tissue and healthy flesh are formed, and soon the sore is permanently cured because the source has been destroyed. S. S. S. does not make a surface cure, but by supplying the blood with healthful, tissue-building properties it begins at the bottom and causes the flesh at the diseased spot to firmly and permanently knit together, and the place is left sound and well. FIVE LEAP TO DEATH AT PHILADELPHIA FIRE

Five Others Likely to Die of Injuries Received at Burning of Shirtwaist Factory.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—Five persons, four girls and one man, leaped to their death today in a panic caused by a fire in a four-story factory building. Five others received probably fatal injuries and many more were less seriously hurt.

Nearly all the dead and severely injured were employed in the shirtwaist factory of Joseph Chachian on the fourth floor. Chachian was injured, one of his daughters is dead and another is dying

Many persons jumped from windows. Men on the streets below spread blankets and an awning to break their falls, but in the smoke that filled the narrow streets some victims fell to the pavement before these improvised fire nets could be extended for them.

The building was equipped with fire escapes and fire ropes. One man, instead of lowering the rope and sliding down it, jumped from the window with the loose end in his hands. He was killed.

The monetary loss is estimated at $50,000.

FREEZE WHILE WAITING FOR END OF THE WORLD

One Child Dead and Another Dying in Consequence of Parents' Fanatic Action

BELLINGHAM, Wash., Jan. 19.—Waiting for a fiery chariot from heaven, George Paschtot, his wife and four children stripped themselves yesterday at Linden, Wash., and clambered to the roof of their home in freezing weather. When discovered their baby, Marta, aged 11 months, was dead from exposure and hunger, and another child was at the point of death.

Sunday a "Holy Roller" exhorted the members of the sect at Lyden to prepare for the end of the world. Paschtot and wife took the instruction literally, stripped themselves and the children to the skin and danced the night through in the bitter weather

The prosecuting attorney said today he would try and hold the preaching elder on a manslaughter charge. Paschtot apears to be regaining his senses but the woman and two children are still violently insane.

U. S. AND GERMANY FACE A TARIFF WAR

Hitch in Negotiations Arises Over Restrictions Placed on American Meats and Fruits.

BERLIN, Jan 19.—Germany and the United States are face to face with a bitter tariff war, involving $500,000,000 of trade a year With Berlin's final program in the hands of the state department at Washington, and all hope of a recession from the stand against American meats gone, the situation is desperate and only the deftest diplomacy and the most impeccable statesmanship can avert the crisis.

The announcement from Washington that President Taft has signed the proclamations granting minimum rates to Great Britain, Italy, Russia, Spain, Switzerland and Turkey emphasises the German situation. If a trade agreement is not made before February 7, when the present truce expires, Germany's high tariff will go into effect automatically. America can only retaliate with her maximum rates.

The months of negotiations between the German ambassador at Washington and the state department are regarded as futile.

The latest figures of the German trade, gathered a few days ago, show that in 1909 Germany exported to the United States goods to the value of $166,913,580, an increase of $38,674,546 over the figures for 1908. Large gains were shown in chemicals, hides and iron.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19—Because the negotiations relative to the German-American tariff issue are still in progress, the department of state is withholding the details of the daily exchanges. Enough is known of what is going on, however, to warrant the statement that the actual point of danger lies in the insistence of the American government on the relaxation of the decrees which have practically prohibited the importation into Germany of American cattle and fruits.

ATTACKS FILIBUSTERS IN MINERS' CONVENTION

President Lewis Takes First Battle With Opponents of His Administration.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 19.—"The filibusterers," so called by President Lewis, in the convention of the United Mine Workers of America today, succeeded in carrying by a large majority, a motion to suspend during the convention the salaries of the international organizers who are in attendance as representatives of local unions and to put upon the unions the expense of their support as delegates.

The anti-administration speakers charged that about 50 international organizers, being under the control of President Lewis, had been called into the convention in the expectation that they could further the interests of the administration, and that some of them had solicited delegates' credentials from local unions supposed to be unable to send delegates.

After his opponents had presented their case, President Lewis made a statement flatly denying that he had asked international organizers to support his policies in the convention or that he had ever caucused the organizers. He had called some of them to the convention, he said, so that the delegates might have first-hand information of the progress of the organization in non-union coal mining fields.

SAYS SALARIES UNLAWFUL

G. F. Patrick Discovers Members of Lunacy Board Are Not Entitled to Compensation.

DENVER, Jan 19.—From now on service on the state board of lunacy commissioners will be honorary, and not only that, but salaries collected from March, 1907, may be recovered by the state, according to G F Patrick, a member of the board, who today made a written statement to this effect to Governor Shafroth, Auditor Kenehan and Attorney General Barnett

The Sixteenth General Assembly abolished the salary, but the members have drawn it on the theory that their offices were constitutional and the legislature had no right to pass a law changing their compensation

Mr. Patrick takes a different view and in future will refuse to sign salary vouchers.

EACH PROPERTY OWNER SHOWN INDIVIDUAL PAVING COST; ASKED TO EXPRESS OPINION

Within the next few days the committee of 11 in charge of preliminary plans for paving the downtown district will mail to each property owner in the proposed district a letter containing the cost of paving each front foot, as estimated by City Engineer T L. Waggener and Assistant City Engineer G. E. Austin The estimates, which were completed yesterday, show the cost to each property owner of each of the six leading paving materials Property owners will be asked to reply to these letters, giving their preferences and their views on paving In this way the committee of 11 will be able to learn the individual wishes of all concerned.

The proposed paving district includes Tejon street from the south side of Platte to the north side of Vermijo Pikes Peak avenue from the Antlers hotel to the west side of Nevada avenue, and Huerfano and Cucharas streets from the east side of Cascade to the west side of Nevada A majority of property owners in the district are in favor of paving, and the merchants are almost a unit in urging it

Itemized Cost of Sarco.

The table given herewith shows the itemized cost of paving with "Sarco," a mineral rubber material that is quoted at the lowest figure of the six materials under consideration. In the case of the other five materials, the only change is in the cost of the paving material itself. The table is as follows:

Cost to Property Owners.

11,953 cubic yards of excavation, at 40c	$ 4,774.00
37,630 square yards of paving, at $1 95	73,378.50
9,856 linear feet of curbing at 60c	5,913.00
852 linear feet of curbing and ditch, at $1.10	937.00
188 linear feet of covered street ditch, at $2.50	470.00
1,461 linear feet of 3x12 oak binder, at 50c	730.50
7 manhole changes	35.00
Engineering, supervising and contingent	3,500.00
Interest	2,000.00
Advertising	600.90
	$ 92,338.30
One per cent for collection	$ 923 38
Total	$ 93,261.58

Cost to Street Car Company.

2,750 cubic yards of excavation, at 60c	$ 1,650.00
9,085 square yards of paving, at $1.95	17,715 75
90 linear feet of 3x12 oak binder, at 50c	45.00
Engineering, advertising and interest	2,000.00
	$ 21,410.75
One per cent for collection	214.11
Total	$ 21,624.86

The difference in the cost of the material used is the only change made in this table by the other kinds of paving Sarco, as shown above, is quoted at $1 95 a square yard Sheet asphalt is quoted at $2 a square yard bituminous macadam at $2 15 vitrified brick at $2 40, bitulithic at $2 40, and creosoted wood blocks at $2.80 This makes the total cost to the property owners and to the street car company for each of the other five materials as follows.

Cost to Property Owners.

Sheet asphalt	$ 97,161 90
Bituminous macadam	100,582 67
Vitrified brick	110,364 42
Bitulithic	110,364 42
Creosoted wood blocks	125,566 94

Cost to Street Car Company

COST TO STREET CAR COMPANY
Sheet asphalt	$ 22,082 65
Bituminous macadam	23,460 56
Vitrified brick	25,753 99
Bitulithic	25,753 99
Creosoted wood blocks	29,424.32

Of the six kinds of pavements on which estimates are given herewith sarco asphalt and brick appear to be the most popular Creosoted wood blocks are too expensive the bitulithic people have withdrawn from active competition and bituminous macadam is thought to be an infringement on the bitulithic patent Some idea of the cost of sarco asphalt and brick to the individual property owners is given in the figures below The cost of street intersections is assessed against property extending 200 feet in each direction from the crossing.

On Tejon Street.

On Tejon street from Platte to Bijou, a 50-foot lot in the north half of the block, which will not be assessed for any intersection, will be assessed $337.69 for sarco, $344 44 for asphalt, and $398 47 for brick. In this block the city's share for Acacia park is as follows Sarco, $3,163 56, asphalt, $3,226.83, brick, $3,733. In the southern half of the block between Platte and Bijou, and the northern half of the block between Bijou and Kiowa, where the Bijou street crossing is prorated among property owners, the cost to the 50-foot lot is as follows Sarco, $395.44, asphalt, $402.35; brick, $466.62 Approximately the same figures hold good for 50-foot lots in the southern half of the block between Bijou and Kiowa, and the northern half of the block between Kiowa and Pikes Peak Property owners there will be assessed their share of the Kiowa street crossing.

On Pikes Peak Avenue.

The width of Pikes Peak avenue increases the cost to property owners who must bear the cost of paving the intersection of this street and Tejon. The figures for the properties on the four corners is as follows: First National Bank building, 180 feet on Tejon street, 71.25 feet on Pikes Peak avenue; sarco, $2,504.50; asphalt, $2,554.65; brick, $2,967.90. Exchange National Bank building, 198 feet on Tejon, 71 25 feet on Pikes Peak, sarco $1,909, asphalt, $1,947.18, brick, $2,271.71. El Paso National Bank building, 105 feet on Tejon, 50 feet on Pikes Peak; sarco, $1,507.22, asphalt, $1,537 47; brick, $1,778.64. "Busy Corner," 80 feet on Tejon, 50 feet on Pikes Peak; sarco, $1,813.70; asphalt, $1,339.97, brick, $1,550.17.

A 50 foot lot on Pikes Peak avenue, including Cascade avenue intersection, will be assessed as follows sarco, $837, asphalt, $843 58, brick, $975.86 Fifty feet on Pikes Peak avenue in the eastern half of the block between Tejon street and Nevada avenue will be assessed as follows: sarco, $514.80, asphalt, $550.98, brick, $637 41

On Huerfano street a 50 foot lot including the Tejon street intersection will be assessed as follows. sarco, $406.56; asphalt, $476 20 brick, $550.89.

Huerfano and Cucharas.

A 50 foot lot on Huerfano street not including Tejon street crossing will be assessed as follows: Sarco, $420.09, asphalt, $428.59, brick, $494 59 On Cucharras street, 50 foot lots including the Tejon street intersection will be assessed as follows sarco, $667.86 asphalt, $671.24, brick, $787 35. Not including the Tejon street intersection the assessment on 50 foot lots is as follows: sarco, $535.98; asphalt, $546.7 brick, $630.12 The fact that the street car company bears the expense of paving a portion of Huerfano street accounts for the difference in the cost property owners on Huerfano and Cucharras streets.

The cost to owners of 50 foot lots Tejon street from Huerfano street Vermijo corresponds closely to figures given for property lying between Platte avenue and Kiowa street

MUST REMOVE OBSTACLES

Council Orders Lawn Wires, Etc., Taken Away as Result of Injury to Ogle.

The City Council yesterday issued an order to property owners to remove wires or other obstructions with which they protect the sidewalk parking in front of their residences. The order is the result of a severe fall sustained early in the morning by former Alderman Adrian Ogle, a street car conductor, when he ran to put out a fire in the rear of 232 North Tejon street.

Mr. Ogle, who was coming south on Tejon street on his car at 5.30 a. m., saw a fire in a pile of ashes in the rear of the house occupied by Dr. J. A Smith, and stopped the car and ran to put out the fire. He tripped on a wire surrounding the parking, and was badly bruised by the fall. Fire wagon No. 2 lost a brass hub cap on the way to the fire, and Fire Chief McCartin is anxious to have the cap returned to the fire station.

ORDER SIMPSON'S ARREST

Local Authorities Ask Chicago Police to Capture Former Local Railroad Official.

The Chicago police have been asked to arrest J. G. Simpson, former Santa Fe ticket clerk here, on a charge of passing worthless checks amounting to $400, on W D. Pitchford of this city. It is believed that Simpson raised this money to make up the shortage in his accounts at the Santa Fe. Mr. Pitchford recently wrote Simpson asking him to make the checks good but received no reply. He learned, however, that Simpson had signed for a receipted letter, giving his address as 63 River street, Chicago.

The Santa Fe office yesterday received a letter for Simpson from a young woman, inquiring whether he received the Christmas present she sent.

THOROUGHBRED OR CUR?

Much Difference of Opinion in Dog Shooting Case Leads to Its Dismissal.

So contradictory was the testimony of a score of witnesses in the case of William Jardine, charged with shooting a dog owned by Alex Patterson, owner of the Patterson coal mines, that Justice A. P. Toombs yesterday afternoon dismissed the case. Jardine admitted shooting the dog the night of January 11. One of the witnesses for the prosecution testified that the dog was in her house all of that night, and that it could not have been killed until the next morning. Jardine was equally positive that the killing took place that night.

The question of the value and the breed of the dog provoked a humorous exhibition of difference of opinion Various witnesses were called and the dog was valued all the way from $25 to $100. One man testified that the dog was a thoroughbred water spaniel, and another delcared it was only a "common ordinary street cur."

Some of the witnesses testified that the trouble grew out of a charge that Patterson employed foreign labor at his coal mine north of the city, and Patterson retorted that he "always paid his debts"

SPRINGS MAN ELECTED

County Commissioners Banta and Madden Officers State Ass'n. Legislation Recommended.

County Commissioners B. A. Banta and J. P. Madden of this county have been elected first and second vice presidents, respectively, of the Colorado Association of County Commissioners.

The committee appointed at the convention in Denver Tuesday, to report on legislation concerning water commissioners, recommended that all water commissioners in each water district are paid by the various counties. The committee will draw up a bill to present to the state legislature, practically the same as house bill No. 252, which passed the house at the last legislature, and was tied up in the finance committee of the senate.

A committee of nine members on the good roads question made a report at the commissioners' convention recommending the use of convict labor whenever practical, and advised the use of concrete for bridges, and corrugated metal for culverts. The committee also recommended the fixing of road tax at two days' work for able bodied men, one day's work for a man and team, or $4 in cash. It advised changing the age of exemption from 45 to 50 years. All recommendations were adopted. It was the general sense of the convention that road overseers should be selected for their ability to make good roads, rather than for political reasons.

BEATTIE TO SPEAK IN MINING EXCHANGE

Scotch Chemist Will Address Public Mining Interests Night on Alleged Gold Discovery

Franklin Beattie, the Scotch chemist and mining man of Woodland Park, who has aroused much interest by his statement that large ore deposits exist in the front range, from Cheyenne mountain to Palmer Lake, and by his claim of having compounded an acid that will save the flour gold values in the ore, will address a public meeting in the call room of the Colorado Springs Mining Stock exchange, at 8 o'clock tomorrow night. Mr. Beattie was to have spoken at Woodland Park on the same evening, but at the request of The Evening Herald, he has changed the place, in order that mining men and others interested may conveniently hear him

He will discuss the mineral possibilities of the Front range, and is expected to furnish substantiation of his statement that no less than 18 minerals have been found in the range.

He says that he has found values ranging from $20 to $120 in gold per ton, and that he will erect a mill early this spring for the treatment of the rock on his property.

AUDITOR COMPARES FINANCES OF YEAR

City Received $432,716.37 in 1909, and Spent $498,???.75 1908 Figures Revised.

City Auditor H. C. Henderson's annual report for 1909 shows that the city started the new year with a net balance of $2,-073 97 The total receipts for the year were $462,716.37, and the total expenditures were $181,698.75, a decrease of approximately $40,000 over the expenditures for 19??.

Increased [illegible] and election expenses caused a deficit of [illegible] in the general fund but all the other funds have money left over. An interesting feature of the report is the fact that the present administration has spent considerable less money in the five months it has been in power than was spent in any other five months of the last year. This is a big boost for the charter, and substantiates the claims of the charter supporters, who promised a less expensive form of government.

Following is the annual report of the auditor, comparing the receipts and expenditures for the last two years:

Police Officer Under Investigation Charged with Notifying Victims of Intended Raids.

The police investigation being conducted by Mayor H. F. Avery is still hanging fire. The Mayor and Commissioner E. C. F. Whitaker of the department of public safety both have refused to divulge the name of the officer who is being investigated. It has been learned, however, that the charge is that of "tipping off" persons whom it was planned to arrest on raids. It is said that keepers of drug stores and objectionable places frequently have been notified of raids planned by the police, and have thus evaded arrest. The natural supposition is that some one connected with the department has been too friendly with law violators.

Knight-Campbell Stock

The Last Ten Days of January

The accumulation of new stock through constant increase of business. The exchange of used makes on our new instruments and the return of pianos which have been rented is a condition that confronts us at this time. We must adopt radical measures if we are to follow our custom and dispose of all new samples and slightly used stock BEFORE TAKING INVENTORY.

This opportunity will afford close buyers and some of our prospective purchasers a privilege worth taking advantage of, practically getting an instrument

AT YOUR OWN PRICE AND TERMS.

$10 Sends One Home Today

If you hurry you may save as much as $150 to $200 on an upright. $200 upwards on a Grand Piano and as much on a Player-piano, the kind you have always wanted.

These are not makes shipped here for sale purposes, nor are they of the cheap, shoddy kind usually found at special sales. Instead they are makes carrying a double guarantee, that of ourselves and the manufacturers.

Be here early and get first pick from this magnificent stock.

About the Prices

The mere quoting of a price means little to you unless you see the instrument in connection and the value. Only after coming here and seeing for yourself will you realize what this sale means to you if you have no piano.

$8, $10, $15 to $20 Cash
$6, $8 to $10 Monthly
Buys Most of Them

Come and see the practically new, used sample pianos of a well-known, long-established eastern firm, in beautiful Mahogany and Golden Oak cases that are well worth and will always sell for $325, $350 and $375, that we will close out for $173, $187, $198 to $263. Only $7.00 monthly buys one. These will go fast, so hurry.

The Very Best Makes

There are pianos in this stock on which we cannot cut the price so much as on others. But the saving to you will be extraordinary, for, these makes are standard in price as well as quality, and any reduction from the established price is just like finding the cash.

For instance, here are beautiful Concert, Cabinet, Upright, Grands, in the various standard high-class makes, that sell everywhere $400, $425, $450 and upwards, to be closed out before Inventory at $276, $289, $317 to $356.

INTERESTING POINT UP.

County Judge J. E. Little will give a decision this morning at 10 o'clock on the motion to dismiss made by the defendant in the case of the city vs. S. S. Minter, charged with violating the local option law The attorneys for the defense contend that the state local option law supersedes the city ordinance, and that the police court, from which the case was appealed, has no jurisdiction in the case. Should the motion be granted and the case dismissed, it will mean that the alleged violators of the local option law must be arrested on informations filed by the district attorney's office, this takes the matter out of the hands of the city.

Dr. Pierce's Health Talks

The miracle of motherhood is often overshadowed by the misery of motherhood. The great functional changes which are incident to child bearing leave their mark for life on many a mother. Some women offer up their lives as a sacrifice on the altar of motherhood. A far greater number live on in ceaseless misery. Their strength fails, their beauty fades, they have no ambition and no enjoyment in life. To every woman

COLORADO SPRINGS WILL GIVE GLAD HAND TO WORLD CHAMPS

Colorado Springs will give the glad hand to Mister Jim J. Jeffries and his pal, Champ Frank Gotch, when the two big men climb down the steps of their Pullman car at the Denver and Rio Grande station at 11:52 o'clock this forenoon.

As announced in The Gazette a week ago, the king bats of the sport world will come here from Denver over the Denver and Rio Grande road on train No. 5, notwithstanding freak reports to the contrary. After arriving here, two automobiles will be placed at the disposal of the big men and their party, and they will be taken on a sightseeing trip around the city. This evening at the Opera House they will give an athletic exhibition.

JAMES J. JEFFRIES,
In Characteristic Fighting Pose.

The one question uppermost in the minds of 90 per cent of the men of America today is. Can Jeffries come back? If the former champion can regain his old time form, there is not a doubt that he will be able to slip a big, juicy lime to Marse Jack Johnson when the two clash July 4.

Up to this time, local fans have been compelled to rely solely on the opinions of the various sporting writers of the country as to whether Jeff is in condition Tonight they will have a chance to see for themselves.

Frank Gotch, the world wrestling champion, and one of the best developed men the world has ever known, has many friends here. He is one of the strongest advocates of clean sport today, and at tonight's performance, he will share in the grand reception which is to be given the big boilermaker by Colorado Springs

Others in the Jeffries-Gotch collection of athletic stars are Farmer Burns the man who taught Gotch the wrestling game, Jack McCormick, Sam Berger, Jeffs training partner, Jimmy Ashell Herman, the bag puncher the Glockners, vaudeville stars, and probably Dr Roller, the Seattle physician-wrestler

SAN FRANCISCO Cal, Jan 19—Morris McLaughlin and Melville Long, the two California tennis players who were the runners-up in the last national tennis tournament arrived home last night from their trip to Australia Both stated that they received the best of treatment in the Antipodes

The tennis experts are at a loss to understand the recent rating of the national tennis commission McLaughlin and Long, who are rated sixth and seventh, respectively, both defeated Mills and Johnson, who have been given the third and fourth places

"The American players are faster than the Australians, said Long 'I am confident that Larned our national champion, could beat any of the Australian fellows"

LONG SHOT SURPRISE AT JUAREZ RACES

JUAREZ Mexico Jan 19—Fred Mulholland, at 8 to 1 proved a big surprise when he easily won the closing event at Terrazas park today He was practically neglected in the betting He trailed his field until well into the stretch when he came with a rush and won by two lengths from a good field Jockey Mondan made a claim to the stewards that he was repeatedly hit over the head by hilling s whip all through the stretch. Shilling was warned that such tactics would not be tolerated The attendance was above the average and two favorites won.

At Oakland.

OAKLAND Cal Jan 19—Long-priced horses were to the front in the first races at Emeryville today but the favorites had an inning after that Colonel Jack an 8-to-1 outsider ran over the field in the first and the well supported Robert Hurst took the 2-year-old event Lord of the Forest well handled proved an easy winner in the third Keep Moving ran away from the others in the fourth, winning as she pleased.

At Jacksonville

JACKSONVILLE Fla Jan 19—Moncrief layers received a drubbing as five heavily-played choices were returned winners

At Tampa.

TAMPA, Fla., Jan 19—Layers had their innings today, when every favorite, as well as heavily-played 'good things,' were knocked down in succession, and lightly-played second and third choices got the money

THOUGHT TO FORESHADOW A COAL COMBINATION

DENVER, Colo, Jan 19.—The increase in the capital stock of the National Fuel company from $450,000 to $2,000,000 is taken to mean that the coal interests of the northern Colorado field have again succeeded in forming a combination The National is controlled by the Van Meter interests.

KAUFMAN GIVES JACK O'BRIEN BEATING AND WINS DECISION IN SIX-ROUND BOUT

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—Jack O'Brien's ring generalship tonight saved him from a terrible beating and a possible knockout at the hands of Al Kaufman of San Francisco in a six-round bout before the National Athletic club tonight. At the close of the fight both men were bleeding from nose and mouth, and O'Brien had a badly swollen eye. Kaufman, however, was in far better condition than the Philadelphian. There was a tedious delay in getting started because Kaufman insisted on the gloves being weighed. After this hitch the men were soon in action.

O'Brien once had defeated Kaufman in San Francisco and the Californian was a trifle too anxious or he might have duplicated O'Brien's feat When the bell rang for the opening the men rushed to a clinch and in the breakaway O'Brien sent two straight lefts to the nose Kaufman rushed his opponent around the ring but O'Brien would stop suddenly and put a hard right or left to the face There was little damage done in the first round, but in the second Kaufman drove his right under O'Brien's heart and crossed a left to the jaw causing Jack to clinch

The minute rest refreshed O'Brien wonderfully and he had all the advantage of the third round His exertions seemed to weaken him, however and had it not been for his clinching in the fourth round, O'Brien probably would have been knocked out About the middle of this round, Kaufman drove a wicked right to the wind and hooked a vicious left to the chin. O'Brien dropped to his knees and when he arose he rushed to a clinch. His clever footwork saved him

In the fifth and sixth rounds O'Brien would not allow the Californian to get set. The Philadelphian would jab the nose with a left and then rush to a clinch before Kaufman could land. In the middle of the sixth round Kaufman caught O'Brien coming in and almost lifted him off his feet with a right uppercut. O'Brien clinched and saved himself It is doubtful whether O'Brien could have lasted another round even with all his brilliant footwork Kaufman gave his weight at 195 while O'Brien said he weighed 185 pounds.

JIM BARRY IS CRAZY FOR ANOTHER FIGHT

CHICAGO, Jan 19—Jim Barry, the Chicago heavyweight, has returned from a long rest at Hot Springs, and, with his hands in good condition is wild to fight. This afternoon the big fellow wired right and left, east and west, for battles He issued a challenge to the winners of the O'Brien-Kaufman battle in Philadelphia and the Jim Cameron-Mexican Pete scrap in Los Angeles. He is willing to give either one of them a side bet of $1,000. And Jim says he has the coin, too.

"If the Philadelphia fight is even, then Billy Corcoran of Pittsburg will put me with O'Brien for the February date." Jim said this afternoon "If Kaufman wins I would like to have him keep his promise to give me a return match But what I want most of all is a finish fight with Sam Langford I am willing to give him a side wager of $1,000 if he will hook up with me once more I know how to fight him now, and have the strength to carry out my plans"

Barry weighed 204½ this morning after a brief workout at O'Connel's. This is bigger than he ever was before.

FRENCHMAN MAY SPRING SOUTH POLE SENSATION

PARIS, Jan. 19.—France is confidently expecting in the near future to spring a polar sensation that will rival the Peary and Cook episodes.

Dr. Jean Charcot, the intrepid explorer, who sailed with a French expedition from Rio Janeiro on October 22, 1908, intending to penetrate to the South pole, has not been heard from since April 17, 1909. He was then at Deception island and since the beginning of the antarctic summer he has had ample time to dash across the frozen plateau that lies between that point and the pole, providing such a thing is possible.

EXII AMERICAN FIGHTERS FOR FOREIGN LANDS

(By Oscar H. Morris.)

With Packey McFarland off for Europe, with Battling Nelson and Stanley Ketchel booked for a trip around the world, with Ad Wolgast figuring on a jump to Australia, and with the Lewis boys, Eddie McGoorty, Sam McVey and other American pugs already in Europe fight followers in this country are obliged to follow Jim Jeffries and Jack Johnson or toss the game to one side

It's peculiar how easily American boxers become favorites in foreign countries Take fellows like Sam McVey and Joe Jeannette—they had a cinch in Paris until they worked off a 20-round alleged hippodrome Eddie McGoorty, who wants to be welterweight champion is making a hit in Ireland and second and third raters like Joe Grim, Rudy Unholz and others are making a good living in Australia and South Africa—something which they could not do in this country with any degree of success.

McFarland's trip to foreign soil is with a view to getting some soft coin He wants to fight Freddie Welsh in England or Wales but if the Chicago stockyards champion figures Welsh as easy money, he is greatly mistaken Boxers as good as Welsh are as scarce as Alec Attella of the present or the George Dixons or Young Griffos of days gone by

Freddie Welsh and McFarland went a 6-round bout in Milwaukee on February 21 1908 and the Chicagoan was given the decision. Only the Chicago crowd at the ringside and the referee believed Packey was the winner—not the majority of the spectators Welsh jabbed McFarland from stem to stern and from start to finish, and the worst he should have received was a draw The hisses and jeers when the verdict was announced proved well that Welsh did not get what was coming to him And should these two clash in Europe McFarland will in all probability receive a lacing

Should Battling Nelson and Stanley Ketchel go through with their plan of a trip around the world they should be able to collect considerable loose change But there is one thing in connection with the trip which is almost as important as the financial question Here it is Nelson may be able to teach Stanley Ketchel some good points about quitting the "wine, woman and song" game Stanley is a "fast" boy out of the ring, it is said and his mode of living has been costly to him Therefore he will get a chance to study a few things by watching Nelson Had the Battler hit the high spots as Ketchel did he would not now be champion. It is doubtful if he would ever have reached the championship goal Nelson always behaved himself and that is why he has been successful in the ring.

Had the Battler given up his evenings to wine woman and song he might never have gotten away with Welsh Herrera, Canole Young Corbett, Britt Gans and others

That proposed foreign trip while it has only been doped out lacks many details but there is reason to believe that the Dane would go through with any good arrangement that might be made Ketchel has no good reasons for remaining in this country for the present as there is little in sight for him just now In England France and Australia he might get the money giving exhibitions with the Battler and if opportunity presented he might engage in a few real battles. He would not have much trouble whipping the best in stock across the pond or at the other end of the globe

It is the opinion of many that Nelson's star as a money getter before the footlights is practically out. He does not draw the money he did a year or two ago and the only chance he has of getting an additional wad is to mix it up in a real fight

Some boxers are liked for the nerve they have and Ad Wolgast is one of them, although his display of nerve may be considered much better than his judgment or the judgment of his manager, Tom Jones. When the pair threw away the chance of a fight with Battling Nelson they did something which caused surprise And it might also be remarked that Wolgast's actions have lost friends for him

To the man up the tall hickory tree it appears that Wolgast missed the one best bet—a chance to win the lightweight championship without standing to lose much But some are found who declare that 'A' is actually afraid of the Dane. Far from it! Wolgast would fight Jeffries if there was enough money in sight

The little Michigan wonder wanted $5,000 for his bit to fight the champion He was offered $3,750 and tossed it away, declaring that he believed he was worth $5,000 and would hold out for that figure

Nelson was originally offered $6,000 by Sid Hester and held out for $13,000 an increase of $3,000 Finally the coast promoter came across with $11,500 and $500 expense money—$12,000 in all The Dane accepted and just about the time it looked like a cinch match Wolgast rushed to the front and calls off everything—just because he didn't get as much money as he believes he is worth

There are sixteen fighters in the lightweight class who would willingly fight Nelson for expense money The opportunity to whip one over and cinch the championship does not come to many boxers and therefore there are many who wouldn't even hesitate to get into the ring with the Hegewisch wonder They hold that Nelson has been champion long enough and is due for a whipping And they are right too although Nelson believes different

From here it appears that Wolgast should have accepted the $3,500 to fight Nelson But he refuses and now threatens to go in A stall or a year or two good luck but he won't get a chance to be the world's lightweight champion in Australia.

WILLIAM W. ROPER.

The selection of William W. Roper, a Philadelphian, as head coach of the Princeton football team for next season, is meeting with encouragement on all sides. He was a star end on the Tiger eleven in 1900, 1901 and 1902.

The graduate advisory committee, consisting of Tracy H. Harris, '99, Robert H. Henry, '00, of Philadelphia, who have had the movement in charge, have been threshing the field of Princeton's football men to select the best men for the position.

The men most prominently considered were Roper, Davis and Hillebrand. Roper was head coach at Princeton and during the last season filled successfully a similar position at the University of Missouri. Hillebrand was a famous football and baseball player at Princeton, who, since graduation, has coached football teams in the east and for a time played National league baseball.

Davis is Princeton's present member of the rules committee and has been prominent in football circles for 20 years, having coached at Wisconsin, Amherst and Lafayette. At the latter institution, as director of athletics in the early '90s, he established the Easton college on the high plane which it has since maintained.

THE PAVING ESTIMATES.

IF there is an owner of property in the proposed paving district who remains in doubt hereafter as to his attitude on the paving question it will not be for want of full information. The Paving Committee has put itself and the City Engineer to much trouble to make sure that every detail is supplied, and the people who are to pay the cost will know in a few days the exact amount of the assessment against each piece of property to the last penny. Separate estimates have been made for each of the six paving materials under consideration, so the materials can be compared on a basis of cost as well as of merit.

The paving district, as now proposed, includes Tejon street from Platte to Vermijo, Pikes Peak Avenue from the Antlers to Nevada avenue, and Huerfano and Cucharas street from Cascade to Nevada. This is a total of eleven blocks, and although there is every reason why Bijou and Kiowa street should also be included, we can well afford to be satisfied with the more limited district as a starter, feeling confident that the benefits will be so apparent when once a few blocks are paved that the rest will come with less effort.

ACTION TOO LONG DELAYED.

Not since the early days when Colorado Springs first undertook to build water and sewer systems has a public improvement been more urgently needed than paving is needed now. It is not until we get away from home and observe the enterprise and public spirit displayed by other cities of like size and by many that are less than half as large as Colorado Springs—that we realise how far behind the procession we are.

Of course there are mitigating circumstances. It happens that the gravelly character of the soil in Colorado Springs precludes the nuisance of deep black mud of the kind seen in other places where the soil is of different composition. This fact alone is responsible for the failure of Colorado Springs to pave its streets long ago, but while gravelly soil has some advantages as road-making material, it nevertheless has several pronounced disadvantages. The worst of these is dust. Colorado Springs has suffered more loss and inconvenience from dust storms than from all other injuries inflicted by the elements, and this evil will continue unabated so long as the streets remain unpaved.

There is good reason to believe that the owners of more than a majority of the frontage in the proposed district are in favor of paving, and would sign a petition without further delay if they could agree on the material to be used But inasmuch as the petition must specify the material and its cost it is necessary to make such an agreement. The detailed information now supplied to the property owners by the committee ought to enable them to do this without further delay.

WORKING FOR BETTER ROADS.

THE movement for better roads in Colorado gains headway perceptibly. Now that the county commissioners of the state (the men to whom the public looks more than to anyone else for such improvements) have held a conference and decided to petition the next Legislature for a large appropriation for improving the principal highways, it may be that enough pressure can be exerted to bring about the desired end At any rate it is an encouraging sign when all of the county commissioners get together and work hand in hand for better roads. This of itself is ample evidence that there is need for such improvement, for every commissioner is at least supposed to know the conditions in the county which he serves, and when there is complete unanimity of action it is pretty clear that every section of the state wants and needs better roads.

At the meeting in Denver this week of the Colorado Association of County Commissioners a committee was appointed to draft resolutions petitioning the next legislature for a large appropriation for road improvement It was suggested that convict labor be used so far as possible this system having been found successful on the work done at Trinidad a year or two ago and on the work now in progress between Colorado Springs and Canon City A uniform system of concrete bridges was also recommended, and other suggestions made concerning road improvement in general

At its last session the Legislature made a small appropriation for good roads work and provided for the appointment of a state highway commission with authority to supervise construction and so operate with county officials This commission has been appointed and it is said to be ready to do all in its power to further the movement, this however is about as far as it can go because there is but little if any available money for the purpose If the efforts of the county commissioners to secure funds for the use of this commission are successful their conference will have been more than worth the while

EL PASO TAKES THE LEAD

The commissioners of El Paso county seem to have taken a leading part in the Denver meeting and this they deserve full credit They have been strong advocates of good improvement during their administration and it was largely through their efforts that an appropriation was made by the last Legislature for the Colorado Springs-Canon City road improvements now under way. Recently they offered to contribute $5 000 toward the expense of repairing and improving the road between this city and Palmer Lake if the state would give an equal amount. It is understood that they will make an effort to get this money from the state while in Denver this week and that if successful the highway to Palmer Lake will be made second to none in the state

It is right that El Paso County should take the initiative in such a movement. Colorado Springs is the principal town in the county—the third largest in the state, for that matter and no one can deny that climate and scenery are its principal assets. This being the case, what is more appropriate than a system of good roads connecting it with other cities and towns and the leading scenic spots of the Pikes Peak region? El Paso, Denver and Pueblo counties should set a good example and El Paso should not be outdone by the others.

It will be a sad day for the small boy if the flat hat invented by a New York man is adopted by the baseball magnates, for foul balls to "swipe" will be few and far between.

THE SCHOOL BOND QUESTION.

To the Editor of The Gazette

The advisory committee of which I am a member would I am sure feel under obligations to you if you would publish in full an article by Elmer Ellsworth Brown, Ph D., entitled "Education and Overalls," which appeared in the Youth's Companion on January 13, 1910. It answers many questions which the taxpayers of District No. 11 are asking just now as to the intended use of the funds from the sale of bonds to be voted upon January 22, 1910.

This article is in line with the report of the school board and the advisory committee published in your paper November 7, 1909, and will recall to your readers the admirable editorials which appeared in The Gazette on the same subject at that time.

PINCHOT AND HIS ENEMIES.

From the Kansas City Times.

The country is gaining in discrimination. Good officials as well as bad officials are assailed now and then, and there may have been a time when it was not easy to distinguish, especially at long range, between honest and dishonest attacks.

But the great moral issues of government have become more clearly defined Systems, practices and policies affecting these issues are better understood. So it happens that a public servant like Mr. Gifford Pinchot, chief of the forestry service, is able to face undismayed the storm directed against him because of his steadfast adherence to the Roosevelt policies of conservation.

Mr. Pinchot has put a check on the great corporations and trusts and predatory interests generally in their exploitation of the natural resources. You may judge of the fruit by the number of clubs you find under the tree. The kind of clubs found under the Pinchot tree have been thrown by the fruit thieves. They are distinctly labeled and the people have learned to read the labels.

SHOULD FORGET IT.

From the New York Commercial.

If Senator Lodge and Congressman McCall of Massachusetts are wise, they won't ask the government printing office to correct a ludicrous typographical error made in a piece of their Republican party literature entitled "The Payne Tariff Law" and now being distributed broadcast throughout the country at public expense This document is designed to show what a really beautiful and satisfactory thing a high protective tariff is. "It appears, the tribute" reads on one page, "that duties had been increased upon necessary articles consumed by the American people to the amount of $5,000 000,000 worth annually, while they had been increased upon necessary articles consumed to the amount of only $273,000,000 each year." Of course the seventh word in the quotation should be "decreased" instead of "increased and it was presumably so written by the two laudators of the Republican party But they can hardly expect the United States government to get out a brand-new edition of their great work in order to set them right before a critical world. "The least said the soonest mended" The country will forget the error quick enough—and these two great protection essayists ought to welcome an opportunity to forget the incident themselves.

AMERICA AND JAPAN.

From the Washington Star

Baron Uchida's first deliverance upon reaching town is worthy of his mission He is here to help promote good feeling between America and Japan, and he announces for his government a policy certain to work that most desirable end.

Japan he says does not desire her laborers leaving home to head this way She does not desire them to leave home for any quarter. She has work for them there and thinks they are best employed there She will exert herself to keep them at home

The success of this policy will remove all friction between the two governments The labor question was the basis of all the recent trouble on the Pacific coast With that removed—as it has been by Japan's course—no danger of a renewal of the trouble remains Japanese students and travelers and merchants have always been welcome in America and will continue welcome Whatever they may find here of interest and worthy of study is open to their inspection

Had China adopted a course like this the trouble that for years has vexed her relations with us would have been avoided The anti-Chinese agitation on the Pacific coast grew out of the labor question So powerful did it become that an exclusion law aimed at coolie labor was the only remedy Had it not been applied we should soon have had an appalling situation to deal with. Chinese coolies were pouring into the country, American labor was in angry protest, and Congress felt obliged to act

China not only did not want to keep her laborers at home but resented the prejudices felt against them in this country. And while it was comparatively small there was just enough opposition to the exclusion law in America, pitched in a sentimental key to increase the anger in China Co-operation by her in the way of discouraging coolie emigration to America, would have had a most excellent effect

But the law was challenged, and a regular system of smuggling by individuals established. Chinese coolies in America increased in number. They came in both from Mexico and from Canada. The borders were closely watched, but the pickets were evaded Some injustice was done as the result of increased vigilance Now and then a Chinaman entitled to enter the country was halted and sent back home But this was due to the rigidity of the inspection the smugglers had made necessary, and not to any purpose in official quarters to misapply the law

Today the general situation is greatly improved. Our relations with both China and Japan are most cordial, and there is nothing on the horizon threatening any undesirable change.

"O Doc," I cried, "I humbly beg, that you will amputate my leg" The doctor cheerfully complied, and shot some dope into my hide, and made his buckeaw fairly sail, until it struck a rusty nail. "Hoot, mon!" he said quite undismayed, "I'll have to finish with a spade." And as he dug and toiled away, we talked about the price of hay, the recent frightful rise in pork, the sugar grafters in New York, the things we found in Christmas socks, the flurry in Rock Island stocks, the hookworm and the hangman's noose, the bright career of Captain Loose. I felt no pain or ache or shock, it pleased me much to watch the doc, and when the job was done, I said: "Now that you're here, cut off my head." With skillful hands he wrought and wrought, and soon cut off my dome of thought, and when I asked him for his bill: "There is no charge, already, still; I work for Science, not for scads so keep the dollars of your dads, to banish pain is my desire, to nothing more do I aspire, if I may win that goal, you bet, I'll be so happy, always, yet!" Is there a more heroic game? Could any man have nobler aim? One poet, old, and bald and fat, to this great man takes off his hat!

The Daily Chit-Chat

After about five minutes of heartbroken wailings on the part of the two-year-old across the aisle the two-year-old's mother gave in and bought some chocolates for him with which he promptly began to plant the seeds of indigestion and more wailings.

"Cry hard enough and you'll get your way every time," murmured the rather cynical looking lady in the seat in front, "and that rule isn't limited to babies, either."

As the remark wasn't addressed to me I couldn't express my approval, but I mentally dittoed it. It certainly isn't limited to babies.

I know a great many pretty well grown children and some as full grown as they'll ever be, who anything that those about them have it in their power to give, simply by applying that rule.

I know, for instance a family of four girls, one of whom has three times what the other three have.

I heard her just the other day, after one of the others had been denied a certain luxury, boasting that she was sure she could get it.

I don't doubt it.

Because she is the best loved child? Not at all

Because she knows the value of the rule "Cry hard enough and you'll get your way."

In very many families there is some one member who applies that rule. Usually it is one of the children, but not always by any means. Sometimes it's a father and once in a cycle a mother

And always the rest of the family gladly give up anything that one happens to want.

A splendid rule, you see.

Only—well, I'll leave you to supply that "only."

If you know a family where there is such a person you doubtless can do it.

"Believing it was her fate because a fortune teller told her she would marry a Chinaman, Grace W. Miller, twenty-four, married Charles Song." I read in a Pittsburg paper the other day.

I wish there could be a law to keep those people who believe in fortune tellers away from them.

I am usually a disbeliever in the saying:—

"Where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be —"

but I think that in regard to a knowledge of the future it is extremely true.

And as you never can tell whether ignorance is bliss or not it really isn't safe to risk the folly of being wise.

Fortune tellers are for those who do not believe in their powers.

If you believe a fortune teller can't tell you anything of the future and merely want to waste a dollar or two, by all means waste it. It is a harmless way.

As purveyors of Arabian Nights' tales to those who know how to rate them as such I believe in fortune tellers, but as revealers of the future to those who regard them as such, I think they are a menace to the happiness of the community, and I advise anyone who believes in them to keep a goodly distance away

THE ALTERED

He sat within a woodland dell
And held the hand he loved so well,
And spoke of how the fairies played
Their elfin games throughout the glade.
He sang sweet songs of sylvan scenes,
Of silver brooks and forest greens,
He told her tales of wooing birds,
And spoke of gently lowing herds,
And all the joys of countryside
The bliss of noon and eventide—
Until it seemed her heart was stirred
By all the lovely things she heard—
At least she moved and in her eyes
There came a look of soft surprise,
And deep within them he could see
The dawning of some mystery.
A rosy blush suffused her cheek,
And so he paused that she might speak,
Right tenderly he lent his ear
The words her heart should speak to hear.
Alas for him and his romance!
She raised her head
"O George!" she said,
"I'm highly eaten by with ants!"

THE LAST SURVIVOR OF WATERLOO DEAD.

Carried the Ultimatum From Blucher to Napoleon, Asking the Latter to Surrender.

From the Chicago Record Herald

John Leonard Roeder, the last eyewitness of the battle of Waterloo, died at Quincy, Ill., July 23. One hundred and ten years old when he passed away, the old veteran up to the last moment remembered the great days that saw the crushing of the power of Napoleon. He was not only an eyewitness of the great conflict, but one of the actors.

"I fought with Blucher," he would say proudly when people would ask him if he had seen the battle. He was a boy of 15 at that time and his home was near the battlefield. Thrilled by the sounds of the great battle he mounted horse and rode into Blucher's army

He knew all the roads and the location of every house and tree and hill for miles around and after many of Blucher's aids had been lost in trying to deliver orders from the general he asked the boy to carry a message. Young Roeder executed his errand so quickly that Blucher added him to his staff and all through the battle young Roeder carried orders and acted as guide to marching bodies of troops.

A Unique Position.

He saw Waterloo as no other civilian eyewitness saw it, because he was back and forth across the battlefield dozens of times, and was a part of them He carried the ultimatum from Blucher to Napoleon asking the latter to surrender After the war and when he reached the legal age, he went into the army to serve the three years required under the German law, and at Blucher's request was detailed to his command and acted as his orderly

For more than a week Mr Roeder, who bore the distinction of being the oldest man in the state of Illinois, had been failing and the end of the pioneer's life was not unexpected. For many years he had made his home with his foster daughter, Mrs John Liebig of 304 Payson avenue, and had become so familiar with the house and grounds that he was able to move about unassisted, despite the loss in recent years of his eyesight

Unfortunately he stumbled and fell a week prior to his death, having just descended the stairway leading from his bedroom. He did not appear to be much injured, but the shock resulting from the accident was too great for one of his advanced years and from that time on he showed signs of gradual dissolution.

At times he fell into a stupor and throughout his week's illness he took little or no nourishment, growing weaker and weaker until the end

A few days prior to his death the centenarian remarked to Mrs. Liebig that he thought he would be able to see soon, but added shortly afterward: "Not here"

The more important facts connected with his long life appear in his passport or "Wanderbuch," as it is called in German. When Mr. Roeder was a young man working at the cobbler's trade in Germany it was required of the journeymen under the laws of the country that they carry such books, and this one Mr. Roeder had neatly kept

He was married before coming to this country to Miss Appolonia Dehm, who preceded him in death by forty-two years. The couple had no children, and in 1852 they adopted Mrs. Liebig, who was then 8 years of age and an orphan.

After the death of his wife Mr. Roeder went to the home of Mrs. Liebig to live. The Liebigs know of no relatives of his now living and for many years they have been as devoted to him as though they were his own children.

Remembered the Time Before Railroads

Mr. Roeder saw the steam railway, telegraph and the electric street cars come into use, but they gave him little concern, for he had never used any of them.

Thirty-nine years ago he practically retired from active work and spent a greater part of his time in a corner of the family sitting-room.

Fifteen years ago he cast away his pipe with the remarks that it no longer tasted right. He never had learned the English language, preferring to speak German during all his years spent in this country.

Since Mr. Roeder's death, Mrs. Liebig has received many letters of inquiry from all parts of the country regarding the habits and mode of living of her foster father, many asking for the secret of his long life.

Speaking of these letters to The Record-Herald correspondent, Mrs. Liebig said that Mr. Roeder was very regular in his habits. He was fond of his pipe the greater part of his life, enjoyed an occasional glass of beer prior to the time when he quit smoking, after which he drank an occasional glass of wine.

Of medicine he used little, salt being his cure-all. At times he would swallow the contents of the table saltcellar

For many years he refused to sit for a picture and it was only after the photographer had told him that he wanted to take a picture of the house that he permitted him to set up his camera. The coincidence happened to be sitting in front of the house at the time and an excellent picture of him was secured.

COMMERCIAL FAILURES.

Business Conditions in America Are Better Than Generally Supposed.

Montgomery Rollins, in the Saturday Evening Post.

It is little wonder that a young man about to enter a business career finds his ardor and ambition suddenly chilled by running head first into the cold, heartless statement, so often made, that 90 or even 95—per cent of every 100 business men fail at least once during their careers

If these figures are based upon accurate statistics, well and good; but if of doubtful authenticity, it is certainly unwise to make such a heart-breaking suggestion to those who find business full enough of discouragement without this drag-anchor

There are a great many sayings and statements that we all accept without question because perhaps we have heard them so frequently that we have grown deaf to their meanings and do not stop to analyze them as we would if brought, in more mature life, face to face with some virgin fact of similar import This recalls the man who had been afflicted with a severe pain from birth and when it suddenly left him when he was about 40 it was the first time that he was conscious he had ever possessed it and so he began to ache with the memory

The writer has always questioned the accuracy of that 90 per cent estimate of failures and also doubted if it were possible that any statistics were in existence definitely proving the proposition His attention was recently called to a printed card handed out by an insurance agent, in which these statements appeared:

Between the ages of 40 and 45, 97 per cent of men meet reverses and lose their entire accumulations

Between the ages of 45 and 50, 97 per cent have lost all

After the age of 50 but one in 6,000 men recovers his financial footing

Not Substantiated.

This suggested requesting of various insurance companies whether they possessed statistics upon the subject, but none was forthcoming.

It next seemed natural to turn to the large mercantile agencies, and by these agencies reliable figures were immediately supplied. They agreed that the yearly average of commercial failures in the United States barely exceeds 1 per cent of the total number of mercantile concerns engaged in business each year This represents only those who are unable to meet their financial obligations and has no reference to those who voluntarily go out of business or change their occupation Likewise, these figures obviously refer only to those actually engaged in mercantile affairs, omitting doctors, lawyers and professional men in general The percentage in any one year has never exceeded 1½ per cent since the days of the Civil war.

Roughly accepting these figures at 1 per cent, and granting that the average length of a business man's career is 50 years—which is fixing it at a higher figure than facts justify—we would reach a conclusion that somewhere near 50 per cent, rather than 90 per cent, is the proper estimate.

It would seem that we are safe, therefore, permanently to inter this 90-per-cent bogy, for the foregoing must disprove the prevalent belief which, at the worst, has evidently had but slight foundation

Education and Overalls

By ... Ph. D., United States ... of Education

From the Youth's Companion.

From the Youth's Companion.

The text for this article is a saying credited to Mr Alfred Mosely, the public spirited Englishman, who has done so much to promote a better understanding, as regards education, between America and Great Britain. "The American schools," so the saying runs, "graduate their boys into overalls."

We might wish that our schools in general came nearer to this standard than they do in fact. But the saying is a good one for a text, even if it is not universally true. Mr. Mosely says that he does not himself recall having put the idea in exactly this picturesque phrasing, but he has repeatedly expressed much the same opinion, although in other words.

Learning to Work and Think.

What it means to bring education and overalls together is that some connection is to be found between the necessary, every-day work of life and the thoughts that make our world of knowledge.

For most people history, literature and science are far-away things, which one may visit now and then, tourist fashion, on some holiday. A college course is one long holiday such as this. The real work of life which comes after is flat drudgery, and has nothing to do in any direct way with the higher education. So life is divided into two parts, one of them bread and butter and the other sugar plums, and these two are separate things, and may not be joined together.

For clear-sighted men and women, however, these two belong together, and ought not to be put asunder. The day's work and the thoughts that shake mankind are all of one piece. And in our schools of education we are continually trying to make this fact plain, so that every pupil may see that knowledge and ideals belong to real life, and real life belongs to the higher knowledge and ideals.

One way that this is done is to seek out the things of every-day life that have the most of real education in them, and carry them over into the school.

When I was a small boy, the school was for book-learning alone, as it is today in some parts of the country. Drawing, singing and physical training were things of the outside world. The use of tools and of housekeeping utensils was even further removed from the life of the school. The girls learned housework at home, and samples of their cooking were common enough upon the table before they had entered upon their teens. It will not be denied that even a generation ago they preferred the making of dainty cakes to the baking of common bread. The boys, too, had a daily round of home duties to master, but these had none of the fascination of the use of wood-working tools. A boy who was handy with tools could make himself very useful about the home place. But a stronger inducement to the acquiring of such skill was the sheer delight of making things. So we used to the limit of parental indulgence the hammer, saw and chisel, and the few other implements of skilled labor that the home itself supplied; and we haunted the shops of the village carpenter and wagon-maker, to watch them at their work, and get an occasional loan of one of their finer tools.

Now, it has been seen that all these occupations outside of the school have a power of their own to educate boys and girls. So just at the time when they are becoming more and more impossible as outside occupations, they have been taken over directly into the schools. In our better school systems, accordingly, the things done by boys in overalls and by girls in checked aprons—cooking, wood-working and the rest of them—are now part of the recognised course of education. And the schools have edged up a little closer to every-day life through these additions to their studies and appliances.

In some of our country schools, particularly in the new agricultural high schools, boys are learning many things about practical farming better than they could learn them on any ordinary farm. It has become a regular school exercise to select good seed corn, to test the butter-making quality of cows, to enumerate and estimate the points of excellence of horses and cattle and other domestic animals. This is educating directly into overalls.

The Checked Apron.

And the checked apron receives its due recognition, too, in training for high-grade work in the kitchen and in the kitchen-garden. There is something extremely refreshing in the air of homely reality which these exercises bring into a conventional school room. In some places this kind of schooling has been carried further yet, for schools have been opened for the teaching of regular trades, bricklaying, plumbing, railroad shop work, the work of an electrician, a ship's carpenter, a dress-maker, a milliner and so on.

In the earlier days such occupations were learned through an apprenticeship. The boy or girl regularly entered the service of some one who was a master of the craft, and learned from the master the knack and language and standards of that vocation and its secret processes, if there were any such. The necessary skill of hand was acquired by doing the actual work of the trade, as helper to the master, beginning with the things that were easier and proceeding to those more difficult.

An apprentice was ordinarily sent to school for a part of his time for book-learning and the gaining of general intelligence, but the school and the trade had nothing to do directly with each other. Even if he was going to be a lawyer, a doctor or an apothecary, the chances were that he would enter his chosen occupation by way of such an apprenticeship instead of preparing for it in a professional school.

But now the apprenticeship and the school are getting together. Sometimes the school is put into the shop, and sometimes the shop is put into the school. The General Electric company at Lynn, Mass., the New York Central railroad at several points in its great system and a number of other establishments have regular schools for apprentices in their shops. The Pratt Institute in Brooklyn and a variety of ... institutions in other cities have classes in different trades and occupations.

Then there are a few schools for certain trades in connection with the public schools. Columbus, Ga., had one of the earliest of these. Philadelphia has made beginnings in the same direction. The city of New York has its trade schools for girls, and Springfield, Mass., has special evening classes for persons engaged in mechanical pursuits.

Two Kinds of Training.

Laws have been passed in Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York providing for such schools. At the University of Cincinnati combination courses of apprenticeship and college training have been arranged by which young men take half their time in the shop and half in the college, and at the end of six years may come out both college graduates and skilled mechanics. A somewhat similar combination has been arranged at the Carnegie Technical Schools in Pittsburg and at the Lewis Institute in Chicago. In Fitchburg, Mass., too, and in Altoona, Pa., the public schools have entered into arrangements directed to much the same ends.

So there are now a good many places where a boy or girl may get a school education and something like an apprentice's training both together, and it seems as if schooling and overalls were coming into some really intimate relations with each other. The combination ought to give us a more complete and better balanced education than was possible when the two were kept apart.

The learning to do every-day work in an every-day way, and to pass sensible judgments on every-day affairs, can give a certain seriousness and steadiness to education which are good to see. And on the other hand, one who has school learning plentifully mixed in with the learning of his trade can turn his trade to better use, and on occasion will stand a better chance of growing up to the top side of his trade, or even growing out into things above his trade, than one who has simply learned by practice and common rule of thumb.

So it will be a good thing in many ways when all trades shall have got some kind of regular schooling connected with them, and when everybody's schooling shall be rounded out with the mastery of some definite work in life.

In view of what has been accomplished in the secondary schools, it is not surprising that another of the results which twentieth century education is doing its best to bring about should be in the direction of more intimate connection between the higher education and the common concerns of life.

There are undoubtedly a good many young people who have a strong desire to find such connection. I am sure that in my own boyhood that desire amounted to a real craving, although I did not altogether understand what it meant.

Young people who share this desire are loyal to the day's work as they find it in their own home setting. And when they become deeply interested in history, literature, natural science and the arts, they are not willing that these should be to them a foreign land, but look for traces of the same interests in their life at home.

To such seekers there is keen satisfaction in the discovery that the growing of common Indian corn, which takes long weeks of hard and dusty work on the home farm, is a subject with which scientists in some university have concerned themselves, as with a scientific problem, and that the price of vegetables and the saving of scraps by dainty cookery, which call for anxious thought in the cramped kitchen of some little city flat, are questions seriously considered in modern economics and sociology and the newer domestic sciences.

The intellectual life and the common life of common people are not to be kept apart from each other. That is what it all means, or a part of what it means. And it is because it means something so important as this in our democratic life that we care so much about it.

But there is one thing to be said on the other side, there is just as much need as there has ever been for the things that are really high and refined and liberal in our education. We would be Philistines indeed if we came to care for nothing in education that could not be applied immediately to practical affairs. And if we went a step further in the wrong direction, and made practical affairs mean only the making of money, we should get a very sorry kind of education out of it all.

We may put the case in another way. What we need in chemistry, or any other of the sciences, is not merely its practical applications, but the whole of the science geared up to our daily life at some one or many points. What we need in a high school or college course of training generally is not merely something practical but a good education turned to practical account. To say that we care only for a practical education is like saying of an aged tool that we care only for its edge, when in fact the whole tool and a good workman behind it are needed if that keen edge is to be used to same purpose. So we are not to forget that the kind of education to keep company with overalls and checked aprons is as good an all-round education as can be had—an education not only useful in real life, but good enough to make real life better and more interesting. A good, big, healthy education that knows how to do many things in the world, and that knows the things which are most worth while, is what every young American needs. He needs the edge and the tool and the man, all together and all at their best.

What the Press Agents Say

ROBERT MANTELL

The approaching engagement of Robert Mantell, America's greatest actor, promises to be the most noteworthy of the entire year. Robert Mantell will appear at the Opera House next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, and Wednesday matinee. The following plays will be presented: Tuesday evening, "King Lear;" Wednesday matinee, "As You Like It;" and Wednesday evening, "The Merchant of Venice." Owing to the unusual length of "King Lear," the performance Tuesday evening will commence at 8 o'clock, sharp. This is imperative, as 'King Lear' requires three hours for production, and the unusually heavy sets of scenery require much time to place. The matinee commences at 2 o'clock, and the Wednesday evening performance at 8 o'clock.

ROBERT MANTELL

The Noted Actor who Comes to the Opera House Next Week in "King Lear," "As You Like It," and "The Merchant of Venice."

Seats will be placed on sale for the local engagement of Mr Mantell and his company at the box office in the Opera House pharmacy Saturday morning. The prices for all performances are: 50c, $1, $1.50 and $2. At present Robert Mantell is having a phenomenally successful Denver engagement at the Broadway theater. The Denver critics have devoted column after column to reviews of the Mantell productions, and William Winter, the veteran critic of this country, says: "Robert Mantell is a great actor, the greatest since the time of Edwin Booth."

"King Lear" is the greatest, perhaps, of all Shakespearean tragedies. To say anything is the "greatest" is to say very much indeed, but it is true that "King Lear" represents the master dramatist's best work in tragedy. "As You Like It" is one of Shakespeare's most delightful comedies, and "The Merchant of Venice," a tragic-comedy-drama, is perhaps the most popular of all of his works. Thus local theatergoers will have an opportunity of seeing this great player in three widely different characters.

JAMES J. JEFFRIES TONIGHT

James J. Jeffries, the world's undefeated champion heavyweight, and his combination of noted athletes will appear at the Opera House for one performance only this evening, commencing at 8:30 sharp. The performance lasts about two hours and contains many varied and interesting athletic feats. The prices for tonight's program are: Parquet, and a few choice stage ..., $2, dress circle, $2 and $1.50, balcony, $1.50 and $1, gallery, 75 cents.

Manager Nye has received word from Chicago that Frank Gotch, the undefeated champion wrestler, will positively appear with Jeffries this evening. In addition to the Jeffries aggregation of athletes, Manager Nye has secured, as a preliminary, the well-known "kid" boxers, K... and ... y. These two youngsters, who are 6 and 8 years old, respectively, have more than made good everywhere they have appeared, and their boxing bout tonight will add much to the interest of Jeffries' program this evening.

E. W. Dickerson of the Denver News says in regard to Jeffries' appearance in this ...: "... a big 'if' in the sporting world today is: Will Jeffries be able to do himself justice in facing the present champion on the fourth of next July.' So conflicting have been the reports that the sporting public is all at sea in the matter, and every close student of the game wants to convince himself and that is the reason for the triumphal tour which Jeffries is about to close. The public at large reveres the unbeaten man, and, having accepted Jeffries as its idol, is wrapped up in seeing him restore the championship to the brow of the white man."

JEFFRIES INVITED TO ... AT MAJESTIC

James J Jeffries, the undefeated ex-heavyweight champion of the world; Frank Gotch, the unbeatable world's champion wrestler, and the score of lesser lights who make up the great party of athletes who will arrive in Colorado Springs in their special car over the Rio Grande at 10.30 this morning, have been invited by Manager Frank Tammen of the Majestic to attend the matinee performance this afternoon.

The invitation was extended through Otto Floto, the famous sporting editor of the Denver Post, who will probably accompany the party here, and the big champion will find in the Majestic's stars this week several performers whom he has met in his tours through the country. He and Manager Tammen will have no trouble finding material for an interesting chat, for, in April, 1907, the latter was manager of the Sells-Floto circus, which played under the auspices of the Shriners at Los Angeles, and Jeffries boxed several exhibition rounds.

Sporting writers throughout the country have been saying that the big boiler-maker has not been stripped for action until this tour since his last big fight, but this is not so, as Manager Tammen can attest. On the tour ... he boxed with Sam Berger, old Bob Fitzsimmons and others.

WHY IT SUCCEEDS

Because It's for One Thing Only, and Colorado Springs People Appreciate This

Nothing can be good for everything. Doing one thing well brings success. Doan's Kidney Pills do one thing only.

They cure sick kidneys.

They cure backache every kidney ill.

Here is Colorado Springs evidence to prove it.

Mrs Caroline Anderson, 511 E. Platte Street, Colorado Springs, Colo., says: "In the summer of 1899 I publicly testified in favor of Doan's Kidney Pills, and when interviewed over ... years later I gladly re-endorsed this medicine. At this time I think as highly of Doan's Kidney Pills as ever. I suffered severely from pains in my back and between my shoulders. My kidneys were very much disordered and nothing I tried helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills. Since taking them I have had no serious trouble from my kidneys or back. I keep Doan's Kidney Pills on hand all the time and when I take them I never fail to get the desired benefit. Other members of my family have also used this excellent preparation with good results."

ELLISTON QUITS POLICE.

The resignation of William Elliston as city detective will take effect today. Mr. Elliston probably will return to Arizona to look after business interests. His successor has not been appointed.

The burden of taxation on the Japanese people for the present year, including national and local taxes and contribution to works of irrigation and to the repair of damage caused to public works by floods, shows an average of $22 a head of the population.

GOOD SHOWING MADE IN FINDLEY REPORT

Called Issued for Annual Meeting and President Carlton's Report Mailed to Stockholders.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., Jan. 19.—A call has been issued for the deferred annual meeting of the stockholders of the Findley Consolidated Mining company, to be held at the office of the company, 347 East Bennett avenue, in this city, Monday, February 21, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of electing five directors to serve during the ensuing year, to consider reports of the officers and transact such other business as may properly be laid before the meeting.

Accompanying the call, the report of President L. G. Carlton, mailed the shareholders, shows the production for 1909 to have totaled 6,818.78 net tons with a gross bullion value of $155,663.77. Of this tonnage, 4,287.98 tons was mined on company account and the net proceeds therefrom amounted to $64,939.59. Lessees mined and shipped 2,530 tons of a gross bullion value of $61,017.98, of which sum the lessees received $32,-871.35, and the Findley treasurer was increased $11,506.16 in royalties. There was paid out for treatment of the ore $16,347.07 and the net gain for the year totaled $33,173.27.

Company Pays of Debt.

During the year, the cash in the treasury was increased about $12,000, and indebtedness to the amount of over $20,000 was paid, leaving the company free of debt excepting the 1909 taxes not yet due, and with $16,405.83 in the treasury on January 1, 1910.

The report further shows that 1,850 feet of crosscutting and drifting, 600 feet of upraises and 100 feet of winzing was prosecuted on company account. This development work failed to show up much shipping ore, but some of the drifts were carried under known ore bodies. By driving raises from these drifts the ore has been developed.

The work done on the sixteenth level, the bottom level of the main shaft did not show as good values as on the upper levels but on the same vein at corresponding depth in the Hull City and Vindicator mines, adjoining the Findley estate, the ore bodies were also smaller and less valuable. In the Vindicator, at 100 and 200 feet deeper, the ore bodies have been found increased vastly in both value and dimension. A winze has been sunk to a depth of 30 feet on the vein below the sixteenth level on the Findley and it is proposed to sink the winze to 100 feet in view of the development shown in the Vindicator.

The report further shows that the Shurtloff mine, operated by lessees, is producing a good grade of ore, and a large tonnage has been developed and blocked out for future shipment.

Mining Costs $10 a Ton.

The costs of mining is placed at a little above $10 a ton for finished ore. During the year 35,000 tons of crude ore were hoisted, only 19 per cent of material handled was shipping ore. It was this fact and the large amount of development prosecuted by the company that made the cost of mining appear high, but taking into consideration the vast amount of work prosecuted the cost was moderate. The average value of the ore mined on company account as shown in the report was $22.06, transportation, sampling and treatment cost $6.95 per ton and the net value of the ore per ton was $15.13.

During the year by negotiations with the United Gold Mines company a vertical side line agreement was arrived at, whereby valuable surface rights were acquired in connection with the Pauper lode mining claim, on payment of $1,000 to the United Gold Mines company.

A settlement was also made between the Findley management and the Minnie Belle owners, whereby in consideration of $10,033.88 the ownership of the ore shoots, lying in the Findley company's property under the Minnie Belle Apex, were transferred to the Findley by a vertical side line agreement, thereby saving heavy expense in litigation to both corporations.

The present officers of the Findley Consolidated Mining company are: L. G. Carlton, president and general manager; H. L. Sheperd, vice president and R. C. Newcombe, secretary and treasurer.

Wilson Mine to Ship.

Shipments will be resumed early next week from the Wilson mine on Bull hill, owned by the Free Coinage Gold Mining company, and operated under lease by Reid, Young and Van Tilburg, the last named mayor of this city. For the last months the lessees have been prospecting development work, and no ore was shipped during this period. Recently a strong and rich ore shoot was entered upon the Bison vein, a lead exposed but never previously exploited from the Wilson workings. The vein as developed at the 300-foot level of the Wilson shaft is fully four feet between walls, and the ore as broken will ship at from $25 to $30 a ton. Rich seams of quartz are shown in the vein and carry high values.

Will Build a Mill.

Charles Knight of Denver, president and general manager of the Rexall Gold Mining company, owning the Spicer and controlling the Mount Rosa Mining, Milling and Land company, owning about 106 acres upon which is situated the city of Victor, was a visitor at the Rexall mine yesterday. The company will shortly commence the erection of a mill on the company's property.

HOCKING TUMBLES FROM 87 TO 25

POOL COLLAPSES AND TWO FAILURES FOLLOW.

Stock Market Closes With Rally After Violent Declines—Largest Day's Rates Since 1907.

NEW YORK, Jan 19.—Those concerned in the stock market had their attention diverted today from general causes affecting values to those having to do with purely speculative causes. The collapse in Columbus and Hocking coal and iron affected the market in much the same way as the Rock Island episode in the market of December 27 and gave rise to the question whether investigation and discipline by the stock exchange authorities were to follow as in the Rock Island case.

The activities of a market pool in the Hocking stock have been notorious for months in the course of which venture some bear traders attempted to profit by the evidence of inflation in the price of the stock by short sales. How little genuine demand existed for the stock was the striking demonstration of its action today when bankers called loans from the holders. The collapse to 25 compared with 87 1-4 for the last price yesterday and 92 1-3 last week represents a suddenness of deflation rare in the history of the New York stock exchange.

The sympathetic effect was particularly severe in stocks open to any suspicion of having been treated in a similar way in the course of rapid advances in their market quotations. There were some of the stocks with a wider market that did not escape the unfavorable inference to be drawn from the day's principal episode. There was a noticeable tendency in fact to point to the incident as sympathetic of methods pursued in a wide field of speculative endeavor through the campaign which was waged last year in the stock market.

The violence of the fall in prices gave rise to many rumors. The announcement of two stock exchange failures directly due to the collapse in Hocking coal naturally stimulated the spread of such rumors. Another crop of rumors had to do with the supposed revenges of powerful capitalists being wreaked upon one another by fostering the fall in values of stocks.

The course of events encouraged the bear party to extend their operations. The final selling movement in the last hour gave special evidence of professional bear origin and the very active demand to cover shorts and the vigor of the closing rally were convincing of the fact.

The opening market gave good promise of advance helped by foreign buying of stocks induced by the better feeling created in English financial circles by the day's news from the elections in progress. Prices closed considerably above the lowest and with an active rally in progress. The total sales, 1,634,400 shares made the largest day's business since the panic period in 1907.

Bonds were weak. Total sales, par value $4,735,000. United States bonds unchanged on call.

GRAIN PRICES RALLY ON COVERING TRADES

Wheat and Corn Recover Early Losses and Close About Even on Tuesday.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—Grain prices fell off sharply in the first half of the session here today and later rallied on covering trades, corn and wheat closing near yesterday's final figures. Provisions exhibited the same general tendency.

Liquidation, based on increased arrivals of grain together with weak foreign cables, caused a slump in wheat, the decline at the lowest point ranging fro ¾ to 1 3-8 cents. May traveled from 109 down to 107 7-8, and rallied to a close at 108 7/8@109, a shade lower than yesterday's final figures. The other futures showed a similar fluctuation. July closed 1-8@1-4 lower than yesterday at 100 1-4@3-8 and September closed a shade higher than yesterday at 96 3-8@1-2.

Almost normal transportation conditions precipitated a rush of selling in corn. Liquidation forced the prices down over a range of from 7-8 to 1 1-8 cents. May declining from 67 7-8 to 66 1-2. At the close May stood unchanged at 67 1-2@5-8. The other futures closed a shade to 1-8 higher.

In oats prices dropped through part of the session but rallied toward the close. The range for the day was from 3-4 to 1-2. At the finish May was 1-4 lower than yesterday's finals at 47 1-4 @5-8, July closed 1-8 lower than yesterday at 43 7-8 and September closed 1-8 higher than the previous final figures at 41 1-4.

In provisions closing prices for May products were as follows: Pork, $31.90; lard, $17 10; ribs, $11.60@63 1-2.

An Emerson Hough Story Next Sunday

You'll find it in the Gazette's Literary Magazine Section—the high-grade illustrated magazine that The Gazette gives to its readers free every week.

When Emerson Hough writes, he dips his pen in ink mixed with ginger and there's life and action in the stories he produces. His "stuff" appears in the best magazines of the country, and it always makes a hit. Everybody remembers Mr. Hough's "Heart's Desire," his "The Way of a Man," and his more recent "Fifty-four Forty or Fight."

Mr. Hough's story next Sunday is called "The Maid of Astolat—A Story of Modern Civilization." It is full of humor and this time it is at the expense of newspaper men. His humor is keen, but it is all good-natured and every bit of it is enjoyable.

Next Sunday's Literary Magazine of The Gazette will also contain a short story, "The Crossed Bridge," by John Barton Oxford; another, "The Fourth Guest," by Helen Frances Huntington; a large installment of Arthur Marchmont's great serial story, "At the Call of Honor;" several special articles on interesting topics, and George Fitch's department of humor, "The Fun of It All." This department has some unusually good fun in a little essay on "The Furnace," and more in a little story on "Leaves From the Diary of a Very Rich Man."

The 157 cases are now waiting for the 157 lucky ones that will receive the greatest book bargain ever offered.

Bargain No. 3—28 Sets Angle American Encyclopedic Dictionary. Cloth bound. Twelve volumes. These sets were bought up at a big bargain some time ago and are all carefully wrapped and packed in the factory in Ohio. Drops as if on Velvet

Disappearing doors of the Viking Sectional Bookcase run on frictionless steel guides. They are also air-cushioned to prevent the least noise in closing. A Viking door literally drops as noiselessly as if on velvet—there is no rattling, sticking or binding when you raise it—and you can instantly remove the door without taking down sections or disturbing the books. The has many other points you will find in no other construction. Double tops make it dust-proof and damp-proof. It is built to hand down from one generation to another. Comes in any of the classic styles in plain or quarter-sawed oak, in golden oak or mission finish, mahogany or imitation mahogany, and with plain or leaded glass. See the Viking on our floor.
